Mr. Morgan's Yacht
Taboos Still Live
Hard Kurdish Fighters
Two Little Fighters

—By Arthur Brisbane—

TODAY J. PIERPONT MORGAN, the influential financier, starts across the ocean on his yacht, Corsair.

It's a bigger Corsair than that used by his father years ago. But, huge for a yacht, 343 feet long, the Corsair is, nevertheless, a small boat compared with modern giant passenger liners.

Even the richest man could hardly afford a ship as comfortable as the one that carries the cloak and suit buyers to the latest styles in Paris, and brings them home to copy them. That isn't exactly Socialism, but it's a good imitation.

Civilized men laugh at "taboos" that keep a woman in the South Seas from touching a canoe, make it a crime to touch a man with your hands after you have touched a horse, and forbid the eating of certain animals, etc.

But the taboo is not dead, even in civilization. Horror seized the British House of Commons yesterday, when a Laborite member, Beckett, laid hands on the heavy mace that lies on the table in front of the speaker, and ran toward the door with it.

The mace symbolizes the power of the House of Commons. Beckett was suspended, 324 to 4.

Kurds from Persia, convinced that Kemal Pasha, Turkish dictator, flouts the will of Mohammed, undertake to correct him. Fifteen thousand of them, pouring in from Persia, made their headquarters on Mt. Ararat, burning, robbing and stealing, as proof of their fondness for Allah and the Prophet.

Kemal killed about 15,000, nearly all of them. But the Kurds, desperately courageous, as is usual with Mohammedans, say he will have to kill all of them to make them leave.

Their treatment of one Turkish aviator whom they shot down, was diabolically gouging his eyes. Proves their earnestness.

Kemal's bombing planes are searching the Mt. Ararat crevices where Kurds hide, a change from the day when the Ark landed peacefully.

Armenians are doing what they can to help the Kurds kill the Turks. In the light of history you can hardly blame them, but they may regret it.

Kemal promises to wipe out their villages.

In New York, last night, two boys, weighing, together, 268 pounds, were matched in a prize fight. Thirty-five thousand paid high prices for tickets to see them.

Not 4000 would have paid half as much each to hear Einstein tell about his relativity theory.

In addition to a moral, the fight is a lesson for self-striving young women. Sammy Mandell, according to Dr. Walker, who examined him when he was weighed, was "dried to the last ounce," trying to keep down to 135 pounds for the weighing test.

He planned to gain strength, increase his blood supply, add three or four pounds to his weight, by eating and drinking before the fight started.

Consider the folly of young women who starve themselves deliberately month after month.

Uncle Sam's farm board asked farmers to cut down on wheat production.

Paul Reynaud, French minister of finance, wants all nations, especially the United States, to reduce production of all kinds, "rationalizing industry."

International co-operation to prevent overproduction is his remedy.

American industrialists, who support the "plant less wheat" program, don't like the idea of producing less steel, fewer automobiles, radio sets, etc.

Twenty-two boats brought 1,050,000 pounds of mackerel into Boston yesterday. The fish sold for four cents a pound wholesale. Some day men will get rid of fish destroyers, sharks, small whales that devour millions of salmon, etc., as farmers have got rid of wolves that destroyed their sheep.

Then a small part of the ocean will be enough to feed the whole human race, unless middle men should decide to throw overboard rather than sell cheaply.

Mailstones six inches in diameter fell recently in Bulgaria, killed five, including two children on their way to school. Boats are missing in the Black Sea.

Imagine millions of small sized and fashioned cannon balls falling from the sky, and you can imagine such a hailstorm.

FOLEY TO AID IN STOCK FRAUD CAMPAIGN

Prosecutor Assigns Assistant to Probe Questionable Sales of Shares

More than a score of stock brokers and salesmen were called upon today by Atty.-Gen. Joseph E. Warner to appear at the State House and submit to questioning regarding the methods they employed in selling stock of the Holland Far East Tea, Rubber and Cocoa Corporation.

To add more woe for the busy stock swindlers, Dist.-Atty. William J. Foley announced this morning he had assigned Asst. Dist. Atty. Wm. Sullivan, who investigated "all kinds of fly-by-night stock sales in Suffolk county."

Mr. Sullivan will work with the Attorney-general's office, the Better Business Bureau and the Boston Evening American in compiling evidence in the combined campaign against stock swindlers.

In announcing the assignment of Mr. Sullivan, Dist. Atty. Foley again urged luckless investors to make their complaints to the Evening American Stock Fraud Bureau at 5 Winthrop sq., so that swift action where fraud is discovered. In addition, the bureau is giving advice to those investors who have put their money into legitimate stocks that are at present inactive.

In addition to rash promises of amazing dividends, salesmen of Holland stock believed in misusing

Victim of Saugus Slayer

MRS. EDITH THOMPSON WIGHT, private investigator, who was found in the sun porch of her home murdered. Police are searching for her nephew for questioning. Medical authorities assert she was beaten to death with a blackjack. This picture of the slain woman was taken many years ago.

NEPHEW WILL TELL OF VISIT ON DAY OF SLAYING

Police Learn Woman Sleuth Had Disposed of Diamonds; Find Stocks in the Home

Bernard Thompson of Dorchester, sought for questioning in connection with the slaying of his aunt, Mrs. Edith Thompson Wight, private investigator, was to be produced at Police H.Q. today.

William Thompson, father of the youth and brother of the slain woman, promised to have Bernard at the scene of the crime at 10 this morning, to talk with state officials, according to State Detective William F. Murray.

The young man has been sought since shortly after the discovery of the body of Mrs. Wight yesterday, but failed to return to his Dorchester home last night.

Asst. Dist. Atty. Edward Flynn, in charge of the case, said earlier today he was satisfied young Thompson had fled.

VISITED DEATH HOUSE.

According to the police, Bernard Thompson was seen to leave his aunt's house at 3:40 p. m. Tuesday. Neighbors are said to have told police the young man emerged from the front door carrying a straw suitcase, and after going into the side yard, retraced his steps to Vine st., walking toward Essex st.

Mrs. A. R. Smith of Smith Ice, Cliftondale, at whose home Bernard's brother, Clayton, is staying, said the missing youth called at her house between 10 and 10:30 a. m.

He carried a suitcase, she said, and paid Clayton's board, remarking that his father had given him $7 too much.

Mrs. Smith said Bernard appeared to be in a hurry and told her he was going to the home of his aunt.

ALL NIGHT WATCH VAIN

Flynn, who was in charge of the investigation of the slaying, said State Detective Joseph Ferrari had waited at the Dorchester home of young Thompson all night.

Contrary to his usual custom, the young man did not return. The youth's father, William Thompson, brother of the slain woman, who was questioned last night, is available for further questioning, Mr. Flynn said.

Mrs. Wight, known as one of the most successful female detectives, was found dead in the sun parlor on the second floor of her home yesterday afternoon by Patrolman James P. Sullivan of the Saugus police. She had been clubbed to death.

The police are anxious to question Thompson, because they believe he was one of the last persons to see Mrs. Wight alive on Tuesday, the day she is known to have met her death.

The motive for the slaying was still a mystery today. The theory that Mrs. Wight was slain in an

Boy Robbed of $500 in Park Sq. Building

Blackjacked into unconsciousness in the arcade of the Park sq. building today, George E. Black, 18, a messenger in the employ of the Standard Oil Company of New York, was robbed of $500.

The assault and robbery was committed only a few feet from the main passageway through which scores of persons were walking.

Black had been sent from the company offices in the building to cash checks at the branch of the National Shawmut Bank on the first floor. He had pocketed the currency and was returning through the arcade when he was grasped from behind and pushed into a passage leading to the basement and Providence st.

When he struggled with his assailant he was struck on the back of the head. A boy entering the corridor saw the blow struck and the messenger fall. He shouted and the robber ran down the corridor toward the basement.

Black was revived in a few minutes, but could give no description of the robber. The messenger lives at 54 Forbes st., Jamaica Plain.

Several persons told police they had seen a short, stocky man of swarthy complexion standing at the entrance of the passage for several minutes previous to the robbery.

Douglass Is Stricken With Hemorrhages

Stricken with two pulmonary hemorrhages at his East Boston home early today, Congressman John J. Douglass was removed in an ambulance to the East Boston Relief Station.

A short time later he was transferred in another ambulance to Boston City Hospital.

Although his condition was said to be not serious, Mrs. Douglass was at his bedside.

He suffered the first attack about 1 a. m. and the second at 5 o'clock.

Dr. Max Braff, the family physician, who resides next door, was called in and ordered his immediate removal to the East Boston relief station.

There he was under observation of Dr. James V. Sachetti for a short time before being taken to the City Hospital.

Eight years ago Congressman Douglass suffered a similar attack and in 1926, at the height of the late summer congressional campaign, he was laid low with a stomach disorder.

MOSES ACCUSES HOOVER AND STIMSON OF INSULTING THE SENATE

HE CHARGES 'FORCIBLE FEEDING'

Resents Action of President in Withholding the Naval Treaty Documents

Washington, July 18 (AP)—The blunt statement that President Hoover and Secretary Stimson had "seriously affronted" the representatives of the American people was made in the Senate today by Senator Moses, Republican, New Hampshire, in an attack on the London naval treaty.

He was referring to Hoover and Stimson's refusal to give the Senate their private document in the treaty negotiations.

Moses said the executive, without right but with a power which was brusquely exercised, declined to cooperate with the Senate at the constitution provides," and that Mr. Stimson had taken an attitude of "supercilliousness much more belittling to Stimmore (his London residence) than to Woodley (his Washington home."

"Thus, he said, "being denied the information which would rightfully be in our possession and being under pressure hitherto unequaled in an attempt to force the Senate to do the executive bidding, and being harassed by long hours in the heat of an intolerable Washington summer, I am seeking to express my resentment and my resistance to forcible feeding in the dark."

WHY U. S. YIELDED

Saying the pitiful thing about the treaty is that so few people know anything about it and that so many people care nothing about it, Moses insisted it was the United States that made all the material concessions at London.

"As a consequence," he added, "we now find ourselves so limited in our freedom of action in naval construction that we can provide ourselves only with that size of fleet made up of that type of vessel which the British admiralty permits us to have."

In his opinion, he said, "This is a piece of colonial territory on the part of those who sat with us at the London conference table."

USEFUL FOR BRITAIN

He said the 6-inch gun cruiser "which we are permitted to build has a useful purpose—for the British Empire. Under that we United States could have had a similar treaty at Geneva three years ago but the American delegates to that meeting were less pliable.

"We are told that the treaty before us is the only treaty obtainable at London," he continued. "Evidently it was also the only treaty obtainable at Geneva; but at Geneva Calvin Coolidge refused to accept such a treaty."

Arguing there was no method of dealing with the London Pact adequately "except through naked rejection of it," Senator Moses took particular exception to the escape clause and that section relating to submarine attacks on merchant vessels.

"ESCAPE" CLAUSE

The escape clause would permit any of the three signatories to build outside the prescribed category limits if a non-signatory built ships to a point which the United States, Great Britain or Japan regarded as dangerous.

This clause, Moses said, leaves the general stipulations of the treaty "to a mere psychological whim which might settle down upon one of the signatories—and in the event of the exercise of such a whim the United States would find itself carrying a still heavier burden of restriction upon its freedom of action.

Moses argued that the escape clause, if permitted to stand without reservation, would be taken for interpretation "to the tribunal organized, paid and functioning as an agency of that League of Nations which the people of this country have twice repudiated by overwhelming majorities." He referred to the World Court.

ON SUBMARINES

The other section he proposed to change is that declaring a submarine may not sink or render incapable of navigation a merchant vessel without having first placed passengers, crew and ship's papers in a place of safety.

"As this article now stands," he said, "Any one of the hundreds of British merchant ships which are capable of being armed would automatically become a war vessel in the presence of any ship which she could defeat with her six-inch gun armament, while in spite of the presence of these guns the ship would automatically become a merchant vessel as soon as she found herself in the neighborhood of any ship stronger than she or in the presence of a submarine."

on the cards to discuss candidates at this meeting, the call being for the purpose of having the organization go on record for or against Fitzgerald's suggestion for a conference of representative party workers.

In view of the partisanship of some of the members, however, control of the meeting is expected to be difficult and it would not surprise many if a showdown was attempted.

SEEKING HARMONY.

Fitzgerald, who is a member of the committee, said today he will attend the meeting on Saturday, if it is the sentiment of the committee that he should do so.

He declared his position in regard to his original suggestion for a conference to discuss candidates remains unchanged.

"I believe such a conference would bring forth the strongest possible candidates, that it would result in harmony and a united front, with victory in the November election," he stated.

LINK ANOTHER REPORTER TO LINGLE CASE

Several Chicago Newspapermen Alleged to Have Been Associates of Gangsters

Chicago, July 18 (AP)—The name of another Chicago newspaperman, Ted Tod, crime reporter for the Herald and Examiner, was brought today into the investigation of the Lingle murder.

The Tribune, by which the slain Jake Lingle was employed, said it understood that Harry T. Brundidge, St. Louis star reporter, would name Tod when he (Brundidge) appears next week before the Grand Jury.

Brundige's information, the Tribune understands, is that Tod, when an employe of the Herald and Examiner, also was on the payroll of the Fairview Kennel Club, a dog racing track owned by George (Bugs) Moran, gang rival of the Al Capone faction with which Lingle was reputedly friendly.

Tod was not available for comment on the report early today.

Other Chicago newspapermen whose names have been brought into the inquiry as having contacts among gangsters are Leland Reese, crime reporter for the Daily News, and Harry Read, city editor of the American. Each has denied his acquaintanceship with gangsters had any mysterious or improper significance.

Besides Brundige, who made an investigation of the Lingle case for his newspaper, another grand jury witness next week will be Franklin Kester, being returned from Los Angeles, where he was arrested. Kester, under indictment for the Lingle murder, has been identified as the original purchaser of the gun with which Lingle was slain.

GARRETT MISSING 26 DAYS!

WAR VETS SEEK BENEFITS OF NEW LAW

Washington, July 18 (AP)—An army of infirm men has begun a march on Government headquarters in 54 cities of the United States, seeking to share additional benefits provided for World War veterans in the closing hours of the last Congress.

The assistant director of the veterans' bureaus said today thousands already have visited regional headquarters throughout the country to apply for disability compensation under the new law.

So thoroughly prepared was Uncle Sam that the Government machinery will begin grinding out benefits before another month passes.

Additional balm for war scars provided in the new act will amount to about $25,281,000 by the end of next year, it is estimated, and it will increase yearly, reaching about $80,570,000 during 1935. These sums are in addition to the $500,000,000 now being spent by the veterans' bureau.

About 156,000 former soldiers made eligible for relief for the first time since the war ended will share the new bounty by the end of 1931. They will increase in number annually, reaching about 880,000 in five years.

The new act provides that any honorably discharged veteran now disabled shall receive an allowance from Uncle Sam. Previously he had to demonstrate his infirmity was the result of war service. The only conditions for receiving the relief is that the disability be permanent and not the result of wilful misconduct.

MISSING BANK GIRL FEARED DEAD OR ILL

Millbury Savings Officials Will Launch a Search for Bookkeeper Last Seen June 10

Worcester, July 18—Officials of the Millbury Savings Bank expressed the fear today that Miss Svea Hagstrom, missing clerk, whose alleged muddled bookkeeping is believed to have caused the run on the bank, may be ill or dead.

They said the girl was in a highly nervous condition when she left town, June 10, and on learning of the run in which thousands of deposits were withdrawn, may have broken down.

They are anxious to obtain information as to her whereabouts, at the same time stressing the point they are satisfied the shortage of $5000 is due to bad bookkeeping and carelessness only.

BACK TO NORMALCY

In the meantime the run, which started when rumors of a shortage were circulated, was halted and conditions were back to normal today.

When the bank opened at 9 o'clock there were only a dozen depositors waiting to draw out funds and they were quickly cared for on the basis of the 90-day "moratorium."

There were no others in sight, and officials expressed their confidence that the wave of hysteria had subsided. They said they could take care of any conditions that may arise.

They stated they had no information as to the whereabouts of Miss Hagstrom, who departed the day after the state bank examiners began an audit of the bank's books.

WRITES FROM ALBANY

Since that time the only word from her has been a letter received from her mother bearing an Albany, N. Y., date stamp.

Officials fear the girl may have suffered a breakdown or met with a mishap and for that reason, as well as the fact that she is believed to be the key to the bookkeeping tangle, they wish to find her.

No criminal action has or will be taken against Ernest L. Smith, former treasurer, whose resignation was obtained after the bank examiners began their work.

Bank Commissioner Roy A. Hovey admitted that for some time he had suggested to the directors that the office of treasurer be filled by someone else.

Highest Paid Woman on Federal Tour

Washington, July 18—The highest paid woman in the service of the federal government, Miss Josie Dell, is making a tour of the country to make a study of the civil service districts. She is the only woman a member of the United Civil Service Commission.

Wagner's Son Breaks Down Under Strain

Bayreuth, Germany, July 18—Siegfried Wagner, son of the famous composer, collapsed here yesterday under the strain of rehearsal for the Wagner festival which opens here July 22. Physicians declared that he was not critically ill but was physically and nervously exhausted, and required several weeks of rest.

S. Wagner

The career of the son of the great composer has been a stormy one. At one time he, with his mother, was charged with diverting funds collected for the Bayreuth Wagner festival to aid the German anarchistic movement.

In 1923, the widow of the composer, and his son were poverty stricken. At that time they were struggling to exist on their joint income of 240,000 marks a year, or about $10.

Yesterday he arrived in this city with friends to visit Washington from Bayonne, N. J., where he is employed in a big radiator manufacturing concern.

In an interview, he revealed that he had been doing electrical work. He stated that he was anxious to make good because it was the first job he tackled since his graduation from Harvard last June.

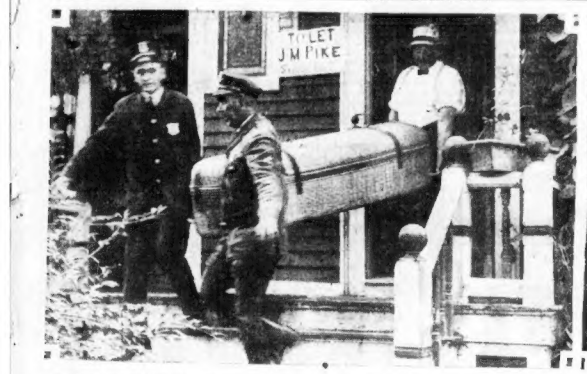
WHERE SAUGUS WOMAN DETECTIVE WAS BLACKJACKED TO DEATH



BODY CARRIED FROM HOME. Police are shown carrying the battered body of Mrs. Edith Thompson Wight, slain Saugus investigator, from her home on Vine st., for removal to the North Grove st. morgue, where an autopsy will be performed. The "To Let" sign on the house has to do with the vacant first floor apartment. (Staff photo.)

JAMES P. SULLIVAN HAROLD COBURN

PARKED TWO DAYS. The auto of Mrs. Wight, parked two days in front of her garage, first excited the suspicion of neighbors. Mrs. Wight, they said, rarely left her car outside the garage, being very particular of its care.

WHERE BODY WAS FOUND. Peering through the opened window leading to the second-floor sun room, Officer James P. Sullivan first saw the battered body of Mrs. Wight stretched on the floor. He climbed to the window on a ladder of William Adams, a painter, who had called to start painting the house.

Asst. Dist. Atty. Flynn in searching the house found stock certificates he believes to be worth from $10,000 to $15,000, together with a pass book on a Lynn bank showing deposits of $600.

BORROWED ON DIAMONDS.

Asst. Dist. Atty. Flynn also found diaries from 1898 to 1921, and scrap books containing newspaper clippings in which Miss Thompson was mentioned. The last had to do with an arrest she made a short time ago in Lynn.

Evidence that she owned additional property in Saugus was expected to bring her estate up to $18,000 or $20,000.

The disposal of the diamonds was explained by a loan certificate showing that more than $5,000 had been borrowed on them, and mortgage papers revealed this particular sum was paid on the house a few weeks later.

No will was found, nor any record of the recent professional activities of the victim.

YOUTH FAVORITE

Chance questioning of a neighbor of the slain woman by Detective Ferrari brought forth the information that Thompson had been at his aunt's home on Tuesday between 10:30 a. m. and 2:30 p. m.

The neighbor informed police that Thompson, a favorite of Mrs. Wight, who had always found it difficult to get along with other members of her family, walked about the yard with his aunt shortly before noon.

The police were told that the two spent about an hour in the yard, looking over Mrs. Wight's automobile and inspecting the interior of her garage. The garage was closed, but the automobile was outside, having been left in the yard the previous night.

While police were seeking the nephew, William Thompson, his father called Saugus police on the telephone and declared he would be at the home of a relative, Arthur Smith, on Smith rd., Saugus, if wanted for questioning.

Chief of Police Mansfield and State Detective Murray went to the Smith rd. address and took the lad's father in Saugus police headquarters for questioning.

Thompson, who formerly made his home with his sister, was closeted with the police officials and Asst. Dist. Atty. Flynn for three hours. He willingly answered all questions. He was allowed to go home after promising to return to Saugus today for further questioning.

Thompson said he had not seen his son, Bernard, since early yesterday morning.

He said that he had given the boy money to buy lunch while he looked for work in Boston and expected he would be home last night. He was stunned when informed his sister was murdered.

"MYSTERY WOMAN"

He said if Bernard knew the police wanted to question him, he would surrender willingly.

He said he could not explain his son's continued absence.

Thompson told police that on Tuesday morning he asked his son to go to Mrs. Wight's home and get some clothing left there. He said he moved from Mrs. Wight's home following a disagreement.

Mrs. Wight was regarded by her neighbors on Vine st. as a "mystery woman." She seldom entertained, and had only three personal friends whom she ever visited.

The slayer fled through the front door, probably a few moments before the newsboy left the newspapers at the house. These papers were still lying inside the screen door and police point out that if he had left after the papers were delivered, they would have fallen onto the piazza. In addition, several letters in the woman's mail box had not been disturbed. The rear door of the house was locked from the inside, probably by the killer, who is believed to have known that Mrs. Wight rarely used the front door and that if she attempted to escape she would have rushed toward the rear entrance.

The crime was discovered because of the suspicions of Mrs. Nettie Balzer, a neighbor, who though it strange that Mrs. Wight's car should remain outside for two days with the key in the door.

She called Mrs. Nellis Hodgkins, who lives next door, and Mrs. Hodgkins telephoned to Chief Mansfield. When the chief and Officer Sullivan arrived they found the door locked. As they were about to force an entrance, William Adams, who had contracted to paint Mrs. Wight's home, arrived with an extension ladder. This was raised to the second story sun parlor window and Officer Sullivan gained entrance. As he raised the window he discovered the body. On top of a bureau the police found what they believe was the weapon used.

OUST REICHSTAG IN CRISIS

Berlin, July 18 (AP)—Germany's political crisis of the past few days came to a dramatic climax today with the dissolution of the Reichstag, necessitating new elections not later than Sept. 14.

Until the election, the Bruening cabinet, which definitely defied the Reichstag, will continue in office, ruling under the emergency dictatorial powers conferred by Article 48 of the German Constitution and authorized by President Von Hindenberg.

Today's smashing of the deadlock between the Reichstag and the ministry followed an adverse vote against the government on its financial decrees, and was accompanied by disorderly scenes in the Reichstag.

Providence, R. I., July 18 (AP)—Agents of the Department of Justice are coming to this city to investigate Peter S. Simonini's story of how, as general bookkeeper of the National Bank of Commerce, he caused a bank shortage of $246,000 through overdrafts and covered that shortage for five years.

Dist. Atty. Henry M. Boss here announced today that he had made the request for the investigators. He said he did not know when the agents would arrive. Mr. Boss declared that the agents will investigate Simonini's activities with particular reference to his story that the late George Bush received all the benefits from the overdrafts.

Man 156, Wed 12 Times Retains Youth 'Til 105

Providence, July 18 (AP)—Zaro Agha, who says he is 156 years old and that the first 100 years were the easiest, landed here from Turkey today to get himself a set of false teeth, and for a consideration, to let American scientists have a look at him.

The date of his birth, as given on his passport, was Feb. 16, 1774, and this was based, said his great great grandson, Ahmet Mussa, who accompanied him, on an actual record in the possession of the Turkish government.

Yellow and wrinkled, with a hawklike nose, bristling grey moustache, and lively, curious eyes, weirdly alive in their deep, sunken sockets, Zaro Agha sat in the sun on the deck of the steamer Sinaia and talked of wars and women and the third set of teeth that he grew at the age of 105.

NOT "VERY GOOD TEETH."

"They weren't very good teeth," he said in Turkish to his great, great grandson, who repeated it in French to his patron, Assim Kervan. "Not very good teeth, more like baby teeth, and they lasted only 15 years."

Zaro Agha has been married 12 times and had 36 children, all of whom are now dead save one daughter who was born when he was 96. He has lost track of all the number of his grandchildren, great-grandchildren and great-great-grandchildren.

"My first wife I married when I was 20," he said, "and I always got along with all my wives very nicely.

"Of the descendants through my latter wives that I married since I moved to Constantinople 130 years ago, I have some record. I know that before the world war I had 22 great-grandchildren living in Constantinople."

HE CARRIED A CANNON

"But I was married first in the land of my birth in Asia Minor, and of my descendants there I know nothing."

For 112 years, until he was 150, Agha says he worked as a porter. His last job, he says, was in a piano factory, moving pianos, and in between times he was always going to war.

There was first a war against Napoleon, in Syria and Egypt, he said, and he fought in that, in the Turkish army. Then there was the war with the Greeks—"Oh, more than a hundred years ago; I can't remember dates"—and four wars with Russia, in the last of which he said he served as a volunteer at the age of 103.

"I was in the artillery," he explained, "and carried cannons on my shoulders."

Agha indignantly denied a report that he had divorced his 11th wife to marry the present Mme. Agha—"she's young, only 66"—who waits for him in Istanbul.

"Me? I never divorced any of my wives," he grunted. "I got along with them all, very nice, and they all died.

"Now, women—I always am interested in them. I like them brunette best and plump."

HAD GOOD TIME AS BOY

He sighed and went on:

"In my youth I had a very good time. Yes, a very good time. How long did my youth last, you want to know? Oh, until I was 105. I'm getting old since then, see?"

Aga again today said he had never tasted alcohol in his life, nor tobacco. He lives, he said, mostly on vegetables and sweets.

36 AMERICANS HELD IN CHINA

Peking, July 18 (INS)—Thirty-six Americans and several British missionaries were captured by rebels and are being held in the upper regions of the Min river, it became known here today.

The American and British consuls immediately organized a miniature rescue expedition and left Foochow this morning on a launch flying the American and British colors.

They hope not only to secure the release of the latest captives, but also to arrange for the return of two British women missionaries now being held for a ransom of 100,000 Chinese dollars by Communist bandits.

Several days ago the British Government evacuated all British residents it could reach and Americans were urged to leave the bandit and rebel infested territory as soon as possible. It is believed the raiders caught the large party while the latter was on its way here to escape further molestation.

YANKEE BEST IN STRONG BREEZE

Newport, R. I., July 18 (AP)—The four yachts contending for the honor of defending the America cup were on their way to boatyards today at the end of the series of observation races.

Westamoe, winner of five of the six contests, and Enterprise were taken to the yards where they were built in Bristol. The Yankee, Boston boat and only non-New York contender, went into a yard here, and Whirlwind, which did not compete in yesterday's final race, was taken to City Island, N. Y.

Probable changes in rigging and general overhauling were to be given the yachts before a later series of races to finally determine the defender against Sir Thomas Lipton's challenger in September.

Official observers said last night the races had demonstrated that Enterprise was the fastest in light air, that Westamoe could outsail the others in moderate going and that Yankee was the best performer in a strong breeze.

Yankee, sailed by Charles Francis Adams, Secretary of the Navy, won by three minutes yesterday in a 17-knot breeze.

Portland and Boston Welcome Rudy Vallee

Champion Crooner Is Nearly Mobbed by Admirers at the North Station

En route t... "the old home town" of Westbrook, Me., Rudy Vallee, radio crooner, was nearly mobbed by a throng of admirers at North Station this morning.

And they were not all women, either.

Although his visit to Boston was unheralded and although he wore smoked glasses, several hundred commuters recognized him and crowded around the observation car of the "Flying Yankee" in which he made the trip to Portland.

Rudy disappeared in the car and the crowd, growing larger every minute shouted:

"Come on out."

He finally did so and as many of the throng who could do so climbed on the car platform to shake hands with him.

Of course it would happen—a girl fought her way to the forefront and sought to kiss him.

"Not a chance," Rudy grinned, and dashed back into the car.

Railroad police had their hands full keeping the crowd out of the car. Vallee shook hands with G. A. Silsbee, veterans conductor on the "Flying Yankee" and when informed Silsbee had been in the railroad's employ since 1871 exclaimed:

"Some record! I hope I last that long."

Maine Crowds Cheer Him as He Returns in Triumph to His Home Town

Portland, Me., July 18 (INS)—The "age of radio crooners" came triumphantly home today.

Thousands in this city and more thousands in Westbrook, six miles away, shouted a "welcome back home" to Hubert Prior Vallee, who "made good" in New York and has not been back since for a long visit.

The Rotary boys' band of Westbrook blared away at "I'm Just a Vagabond Lover" as Rudy Vallee alighted from the Flying Yankee express from Boston.

UNION STATION JAMMED

The union station here was jammed with men and women and children, a majority women. Outside the station were other thousands. It was with difficulty that a motor parade started across the principal streets of Portland on its way to Westbrook, where Rudy's "dad" has a drug store and a home.

Riding a La Lindberg atop the lowered top of a touring type automobile Rudy received a big ovation from crowds along the streets of Portland. Office building windows were jammed. Girls along the route threw "the Vagabond lover" kisses and the men just smiled.

TOWN DECORATED

Entering Westbrook, Rudy was greeted by a riot of color. Westbrook was bedecked in red, white and blue and practically every man, woman and child of Westbrook's 11,000 population were out en masse.

The motor parade came to a stop at the Vallee home and Rudy graciously thanked everybody for the welcome.

Tomorrow night the "ace of radio crooners" will attend a banquet tendered him by the University of Maine Alumni at a local hotel.

Monday is a holiday in Westbrook. It's "Rudy Vallee Day." There's to be a shopping tour for Rudy on Main street, Westbrook, in the afternoon and in the evening a military and civic parade with a banquet and ball in American Legion hall to top it off. Rudy is a member of the Westbrook Legion Post.

Stock Deal Victims Lose Old Home

Until the summer of 1929, Mr. and Mrs. B., each past 60 years of age, together faced their waning years with serenity.

They had their home for 30 years in Nahant. It was alive with the memory of the two children they had reared. They had a savings account of $8900. Dad B. increased the income—when his rheumatism would permit—by odd jobs of carpentering.

But a glib stock salesman came along. Mother B. saw a chance to save Dad even the part-time labor. She believed the salesman.

Today, Mr. and Mrs. B., much older than the additional year, are living in a $14 a month cottage. The $8900 has gone. And Dad goes forth in quest of work every morning instead of occasionally.

Mrs. B. made a gallant attempt at humor as she told her story to representatives of the Evening American Stock Fraud Bureau and Atty.-Gen. Warner.

HEAD IS UNBOWED

Mrs. B. is now very poor but her pride is inspiring. It is her pride that leads the Evening American to withhold her name.

She explained:

"My husband does jobs for a lot of rich people in Nahant. They've known him for years. If they know our circumstances they'd come offering us money. We couldn't let them do that."

But Mrs. B.'s story already has had sweeping results. It brought about the beginning of a State-wide inquiry into stock salesmen's methods. It reopened the inquiry into the sale of Holland Far East Tea, Coffee and Cocoa corporation stock. And it brought Harry Jaspon, star high pressure salesman, indicted two months ago in the Page & Shaw, Inc., stock sales inquiry, once more into the limelight.

In June, 1929, Mrs. B. answered a mailed prospectus that gave her one share of Holland stock and a pound of coffee for $1. Presently came Salesman No. 1, who induced Mr. and Mrs. B. to invest $9 "to make it an even $10"—without additional coffee. Soon came a higher geared sales lad. He raised the B.'s holding to an even $200. A third man made it $800.

Then Harry Jaspon, big in stature, sunny and rapid in conversation, the de luxe salesman of them all, dropped in on the B.'s—and stayed for dinner.

Half way through the dinner Jaspon had learned of that savings account. Mrs. B. graphically complained of the subsequent campaign.

UNFOLDS GLIB YARN

She said:

"Mr. Jaspon seemed such a friendly man. He told us that the officials were big, generous fellows who wanted the people in moderate circumstances to profit by the big profits that were bound to come. Real wealthy people weren't allowed to invest, he said.

"Mr. B. said I were afraid at first to take all the money out of the bank and invest it. It had taken us a lifetime to get it there.

"Mr. Jaspon didn't press us the first night. But he did tell us that the shares had gone up 85 cents in value, four months before the first salesmen visited us.

"The one beauty about this stock is that you can always turn it in for money the minute you wish," Jaspon promised."

Jaspon had the story about huge coffee plantations in South America, big contracts with chain stores, hotels, ships, etc., down to a smooth flowing patter, Mrs. B. declared.

After the first night, Jaspon took to dropping in at intervals of a week or so.

Mrs. B. also was swindled of many a meal on these visits, she said.

"Always at meal time, he came, not that I begrudge him the meals though I don't feel very friendly to him."

Once as part recompense, Jaspon brought along a percolator and a pound of Holland coffee and did the serving. But he couldn't resist the sales talk at that. He declared:

"We're going to make and market these percolators, and the investors will get 11 cents on each one sold."

FINALLY INVEST SAVINGS

Gradually Jaspon's sales talk battered down the faint resistance. If they put the entire $8900 in Holland stock, Mrs. B. charged Jaspon with promising, they would be "drawing an income of $12,000 within five years." She continued:

"He said his mother had invested $20,000, all her money, in the stock, and that all his other relatives were in on it."

The B. bank account finally went into the stock. In October they received a dividend. In January none came, nor has any since. At one time Jaspon took certificates for $1100 in stock from them when they wished to redeem it. But nothing came of it and Raymond Holland, treasurer of the company, returned the stock, explaining the company could not sell it at the time. There has been no market since, they have learned.

So early last spring, Mr. and Mrs. B. were forced out of their old home. A moving wagon carted their belongings to the $14 a month cottage in a strange section of the city, and Mr. B. started getting up at dawn looking for daily work.

HARRY JASPON, already indicted for stock irregularities, stripped aged Nahant couple of life savings, with smooth talk, the couple told Atty.-Gen. Warner. The State officials are anxious to find Jaspon and question him.

USE COOLIDGE NAME IN SALE OF STOCKS

the best of names in inducing investments, according to stories turned over to the attorney-general.

The task of locating the salesmen against whom charges of misrepresentation have been made to the Boston Evening American Stock Fraud Bureau and the attorney-general, was given to Police Inspector John Mitchell.

After hearing the stories of women purchasers of Holland Corporation stock, Assistant Attorney-General Louis M. Sawyer, in charge of the stock fraud inquiry, said he was particularly anxious to have Harry Jaspon, a former stock salesman, appear and answer complaints made by several women stock buyers.

Jaspon, who lives at 12 Jacobs st., Dorchester, is under indictment by the Middlesex County grand jury on fraud charges in the Page & Shaw, Inc., stock sales investigation.

DENIES KNOWLEDGE

Raymond D. Holland, vice-president and treasurer of the Holland company, who was called to the State House Thursday, assured Mr. Sawyer that the company officials had no knowledge of the salesmanship methods imputed to Jaspon by the women.

Mr. Sawyer said he was particularly anxious to question Jaspon about the complaint of Mrs. B——, of Nahant, whose story of how she and her husband invested their life savings of $8000 appears in another column of today's Boston Evening American.

The activities of Jaspon as one of the "high pressure men" in the Holland stock sales drive, veered the general inquiry into specific curiosity as to the tactics apparently used by the majority of the Holland salesmen.

An examination of the records of the Department of Public Utilities showed that 38 salesmen were registered as handling both Page & Shaw and Holland Tea stock.

With this list in mind, Mr. Sawyer was interested in the stories of several investors received through The Evening American which indicated that several of the salesmen had offered to replace Holland stock with Page & Shaw stock or vice versa. The stories also indicated that at least four of the salesmen used the same methods in selling Holland stock that brought about a Middlesex grand jury inquiry into the Page-Shaw selling campaign.

Mr. Sawyer was also in possession of information indicating that several of the men under indictment in the Page-Shaw case had been interested in the flotation of stock in two other companies during 1929. These two companies failed to pay dividends.

The head of certain stock salesmen was occupying Mr. Sawyer's chief interest, he announced that the investigation into the recent sales of several bogus stocks, chiefly oil and mine, was continuing. Mr. Sawyer announced several days ago, that the evidence in his possession indicated that more than $1,000,000 has been taken from investors in the metropolitan area in recent months.

W. M. Thayer of Belfast, Me., agreed he purchased stock in the Holland company on the representation that "Calvin Coolidge had just purchased 20,000 shares at 61 per share and that the company was to pay a 15 per cent dividend in November, 1929, and then put it on the stock exchanges at $1.65."

In Connecticut, salesmen were free in using the name of former Governor Holcomb of that state as an investor.

Fred Wells of Southwest Harbor, company owned large coffee fields Me., who invested $4357, said the salesmen told him the Holland in South America and furnished all the coffees for chain stores, such as the Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company, and that the stock was to immediately go on the market at $5 a share. He was also told that he could get his money back whenever he wanted to sell, he said.

WILD PROMISES MADE

In almost every complaint received by the Evening American and the Better Business Bureau the promise that the stock was to go immediately on the Boston and New York Stock Exchanges at an extravagant increase was the lead made by the salesmen, whose tactics were repudiated to the attorney-general by Mr. Holland.

Are You a Victim?

If you have been victimized by stock swindlers, the Boston Evening American, co-operating with Government, State and County officials, will be glad to advise you what is best to be done. SCORES DIE AS TYPHOON HITS

Tokio, July 18 (AP)—The worst typhoon in 10 years swept the Island of Kiushui today. It was believed many persons were killed and that property damage was heavy. Communications were cut and little news was available from the island.

The typhoon proceeded toward Korea, which recently suffered from devastating flood and torrential rains. A village was buried Wednesday beneath a landslide and about 300 persons were killed.

Smuggling Ring Broken Up by Wooing of Swiss Maid

New York, July 18 (AP)—How the ardent wooing of a young Swiss maiden by an American customs agent broke up a million-dollar watch smuggling ring was disclosed today by federal officials.

Marie Salmann, 21, was charmed by the suave manners of the handsome and seemingly wealthy young American who could court her in French, German and Italian. The agent, who has since left the service and whose name has not been disclosed, learned from her the meanings of the words "Esther" and "Uncle," whose frequent appearance in cables between the young woman and American business men puzzled customs officials.

"Esther," he learned, meant "shipments," and "uncle" meant "customs brokers" here. Thus the message, "Esther is sick and should go back to Europe," was understood to mean that as soon as the shipment reached this side it should be sent back, since Government authorities were suspicious.

On the basis of this information convictions were obtained against two of the smugglers and two examiners at the United States appraisers' stores, who were bribed to pass swiss watches and watch movements into this country as earthenware and bronze pieces.

Minister Swindles Flock of Fortune

By EX-SWINDLER

Sermons and swindles.

That was the turn of the stock racket developed by Fenwicke L. Holmes, former pastor of the Church of Divine Science of New York City.

He preached welfare of the soul and extended the glad hand and ready smile. Usually, the hand and the smile carried to the members of his flock, who paid him $12,000 a year and who met regularly in the Biltmore Hotel, an introduction to his brother, William.

And William always had handy a batch of stock certificates.

Arizona-Tucson Copper, Princeton Gold Mines and Fremont Grant, Inc., were the stocks most frequently unloaded on the unwary souls who expected honest dealings from a minister.

PULPIT HIS SET-UP

Fenwicke Holmes has one of the most perfect set-ups, from a stock racketeering point of view, in America. As I have told you before, the toughest part of the road, for a stock racketeer, is to instill confidence in the prospective "mooch." The kindly-faced Mr. Holmes did that from his pulpit.

Then, after church conferences, he managed to introduce his brother as the "wealthy western capitalist." From that point on it was just a question of raking in the shekels. Invariably, the brother managed to recommend stocks sold through William C. Carr, a broker. All are now under injunction in New York and waiting trial in the federal courts.

The "Rev. Mr." Holmes is still preaching, while that trial is pending, though he is no longer with the Church of Divine Science.

WOMAN LOSES $35,000

One woman from Ohio went to New York for the summer and attended one of the Holmes lectures with a friend. After the services she remained to meet "The Pastor." Before that day had passed she had been sold $10,000 worth of stock in Arizona Tucson Copper.

She then went to Europe, but when she returned the exponent of stocks and religion took up her trail again. He followed her to Chicago, then back to her Ohio home, and finally to Atlantic City, before he sold her $25,000 worth more stock for cash, and wound up that particular case by trading her $2500 more worthless stock paper for a diamond ring the lady wore and which the dispenser of stocks and sermons greatly admired.

The Tucson Arizona mining proposition was purely a stock selling proposition. There was land, owned by the company, but its productivity of copper was something else again.

STOCKS WORTHLESS

Most of the gold in Princeton Gold Mines was on the beautifully lettered stock certificates sold to the "mooches." The property of the Fremont Grant, Inc., proposition was an abandoned mining claim in Utah, worked only 50 years before. At that the Holmes organization didn't even own the property. They bought a mortgage on it, and then, when the victims no longer sent in their money in return for stock, allowed the mortgage to lapse. The holders of the mortgage foreclosed and even the old, worked-out claim went out from its doubtful listing as an "asset."

The Holmes clique operated on the old stockester axiom that the gross is the net. The net in their case, was the smooth tongue of the preacher to rope in the victims. The gross, in their total activities, went into millions.

Right here and now is the place to make another statement clear. All stocks that are listed are not good, and all good stocks are not listed. Generally, a listed stock, recommended by a banker, or a broker of recognized standing, may be regarded as a safe issue. But that isn't true in all cases. The Stock Exchange board of governors has strict rules intended to guard purchasers of stock through the exchange from swindle and to keep swindlers from operating.

The system of the Holmes clique was this:

A Boston "tipster sheet" circularized all stockholders of the company and thousands of others plugging the Advance Rumely stock. It insisted the stock was headed for $500 a share. The sheet answered all queries as to the value of the stock by its listing on the Stock Exchange.

CREATE A POOL

Now enter Werblin. He was the pool-operator of the group. He gathered in Advance Rumely at the low levels. Some he bought at $40 for the common and about $50 for the preferred.

The buying created by the tipster sheet, circulars and telephone calls forced the stock up to $90 for the common and over $100 for the preferred. It was then that additional pressure was brought to bear upon the holders not to sell below $500 a share. When the suckers were thoroughly convinced that their holdings were going to skyrocket to that figure up stepped Mr. Werblin and sold out their holdings—about 50,000 shares.

Immediately after Werblin sold his stock the tipster sheet withdrew putting pressure on the suckers and the stock crashed to $20—about its normal value.

The racketeers are said to have mopped up more than $6,000,000 as a result of this clever maneuver.

A SIMPLE STEP TOWARDS HEALTH

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is a Daily Essential and Millions Know Its Effectiveness in Relief of Constipation

Perhaps the one simple thing you are not doing to guarantee permanent health is having sufficient roughage in your food. Absence of this roughage is the direct cause of constipation which results in so many other ills—headaches, listlessness, general depression, indigestion and, sometimes, serious disease.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is roughage. It is positively guaranteed to relieve both temporary and recurring constipation or the purchase price will be refunded. Two tablespoons daily (in serious cases, with each meal) is the proper amount.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN also helps you to health in other ways. It is rich in iron, practically all of which goes into the blood, bringing red, healthy color to the complexion. It helps prevent anemia. Be sure to include it in reducing diets.

Many eat Kellogg's ALL-BRAN with cream or milk added. It is a delicious addition to cereals, fruits and soups. In cooked foods, it is just as effective in the relief of constipation. Recommended by doctors. Ask your grocer for Kellogg's ALL-BRAN in the red-and-green package. Served everywhere. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Why Shouldn't Mother Get Vacation from Cooking?

From Martha Lee's Friday Morning Broadcast Over WHDH by the Boston Evening American.

WHEN YOU think of the word vacation you just naturally think of a change—doing something different in a different place or meeting different people than those you come in close contact with during the other 50 or less weeks of the year. And so I am going to make a plea for a vacation for mother. You know, the homemakers' vacation camps have been a decided success for mother, for she has learned her family will not starve, but will appreciate her daily cooking even more than ever when she returns.

Martha Lee

When mother goes on her first vacation without the family she is so disturbed the first evening for fear that father will not give the children a hot dinner with plenty of meat and vegetables, that she probably doesn't sleep a wink, but after the first letter from home with no tear stains or pleas to return immediately, but full of words to the effect that "cooking is real fun," she changes her mind and enjoys the two weeks' much needed rest and vacation.

The wise mother will teach her children the simple foundation recipes, also how to read a cook book. Having the children compete with one another and making a game of cooking will do much to increase their desire to be able cooks.

Be sure there is an ample supply of canned foods on the pantry shelf and place your card recipe file with the favorite family recipes so they will be easily found. It may be necessary to rewrite a few where directions are not sufficiently detailed, and be sure to have a set of well-balanced menus. This will insure good health while you are away.

HAM SUPPER DISH

Slice the cold baked ham thin, cover the bottom of a greased deep baking dish with the slices. Then cover the ham with 2 tbsp. of minced onion and ½ c. of celery. Cover with 2 c. of cooked spaghetti and pour 2 c. tomatoes over the whole. Bake in a moderate oven 350 deg. F. for 30 minutes.

CREAMED HAM AND POTATOES

1 c. finely chopped cooked ham.
2 c. cooked new potatoes, cut in dice.
3 tbsp. flour.
½ c. water.
1 tbsp. minced parsley.
1 tbsp. minced green pepper.
Salt and pepper to season.
2 c. evaporated milk.

Melt butter, add chopped pepper and parsley and cook slowly for three to five minutes. Stir in the flour, then add milk. Cook until thickened and smooth, then add the ham, seasonings and cold potatoes. Cover and reheat over hot water or a very slow fire. Sprinkle with chopped parsley and serve very hot.

TUNA FISH A LA KING

4 tbsp. butter.
3 tbsp. flour.
2 tbsp. green pepper.
2½ c. light tuna fish, flaked coarse.
2 c. rich milk.
1½ c. diced mushrooms.
Toast.
Few grains paprika.
¾ tsp. salt.

Melt the butter and cook the pepper and mushrooms in it until soft. Then stir in the flour and salt and cook until frothy. Add the milk gradually, stirring constantly, and when boiling point has been reached add the fish. Let it become very hot and serve on buttered toast sprinkled with paprika.

Faithfully yours,
MARTHA LEE

BLACKBERRY PUDDING WITH SEA FOAM SAUCE

Half fill a baking dish with berries, sprinkle with sugar and dot with butter. Cover with a batter made by beating together 2 eggs, 2 small cupfuls of flour and enough milk to make a batter as thick as rich cream. Beat well and add 2 teaspoonfuls of baking powder, a little salt, pour over the berries and bake 40 minutes.

SEA FOAM SAUCE

To serve with berry or other puddings. Work 2 tablespoonfuls of butter until creamy; add gradually while beating constantly ½ cup sugar mixed thoroughly with 3 tablespoonfuls of flour. Add the yolk of 1 egg, well beaten and ½ cupful of water. Cook in a double boiler until thick, stirring constantly. Cool. Just before serving add 1½ teaspoonfuls of vanilla and stiffly beaten egg white.

MarketWatch Tower

VEGETABLE dinners and vegetable salads appear on the table of the wise and economical homemaker these days, and praise be, vegetables are more reasonable than they were a year ago—10 per cent, 20 per cent and even 30 per cent less. Native green and wax beans, beets, cabbage, cucumbers and hot house tomatoes are just a few of the attractive fresh vegetables at reasonable prices. There is even a small supply of native asparagus still in the market at 25-29c a bunch. Native yellow summer squash is about 30c a pound and a few boxes of native celery have arrived. A little white corn is with us from Connecticut and sweet potatoes have appeared.

The fruit list is ushered in with the pleasant fragrance of fresh raspberries which, though perishable, are plentiful and low priced. Good native blueberries can be had for 35c a quart.

Most meat prices are a little lower than last year, especially poultry. Fresh killed native broilers are 45-50c a pound with duckling at 30c. A whole smoked ham at 25-32c a pound is a practical buy for many families.

Garden Girl

"Aren't you ashamed," scolded the Garden Girl over the fence, "to neglect your peonies the way you do. Even though they won't blossom again for you this year they need a lot of water while they are forming their root buds for next year.

"If you don't keep them wet now, you'll get fewer and smaller flowers next year and it will serve you right, too. If you are going to divide them, better do it in August or September and don't plant them too deep. The crown should be just about two inches under the surface."

Singer K. O. Looked Like 'Gaggo' to Igoe

by Damon Runyon

(Copyright, 1930, Universal Service, Inc.)

NEW YORK, JULY 18—THE old boy bandit, Mr. James J. Johnston, departed these shores so hurriedly Wednesday night that he forgot to take along a box of Bixby's, the brand of shoe blacking that Mr. Johnston, Mr. James J. Corbett, Mr. Nick the Greek, Mr. Danny Healy, and other celebrities use for hair dressing.

These gentlemen are noted for the patent leather lustre of their locks, maintained at all times against the whitening influence of the years. Your operative discovered their secret long ago. In fact, he would be employing it himself if he had that color of hair.

As it is, he is sleuthing around trying to learn the formula used by Mr. Billy Lahiff to keep his blonde wig from disclosing the trespasses of time. Mr. Lahiff's recipe is a corker.

Mr. Johnston went bustling over to London to do penance behind Phil the Faiter, otherwise P. Suffling Scott, in Phil's battle with the king of the cane brakes, William L. Stribling, Jr., of Macon, Georgia. They meet the latter part of this month under the auspices of Jeff Dickson, the continental boy promoter.

Now the Scott-Stribling matter is fraught with great and grave possibilities, but I do not view that with one quarter as much alarm as I do the failure of Mr. Johnston to take along the faithful Bixby's.

I am really distressed about that. I shall worry daily lest tragedy befall Mr. Johnston at sea, or abroad. I am told that it is impossible to get the real Bixby's in London, which increases the possibility of tragedy.

RAIN MAY BE FATAL

SUPPOSE DURING MR. JOHNSTON'S tour of the water, or while in London, there comes up a heavy, prolonged rain, and he is unable to find shelter? Just suppose that, if you wish to suppose something tough.

It has been established that a rainfall of .004 inches will rinse the heaviest coat of Bixby's from the ordinary head of hair. Then Mr. Johnston might turn snow white, or at least dapple gray, between times. If that happens to him en route to England, old Phil the Painter may be unable to recognize him as the genuine Johnston article, and refuse the old boy bandit his cut. That would be tragedy, indeed.

Our only hope is that there will be a dry spell on the voyage, and during Mr. Johnston's stay in England, which will be just long enough to apply the ever-ready to Phil's end of the engagement with "W. L."—he call him down sooth.

Your operative is informed that his broad insinuations that Mr. Johnston uses extraneous substances to preserve the sombre surface of his hair has aroused ill feeling among Mr. Johnston's friends. They consider my inuendoes wholly canardish, and uncalled for. What all your operative has to say in reply is this:

"Didja ever wet the tip of your finger and rub it over Mr. Johnston's scalp? You didn't? Well, what's the argument, then?"

SCOTT WANTS JOHNSTON

MR. JOHNSTON CALLED UP this department prior to tumbling into the canoe that bore him away, and said he:

"I don't intend to go over for this fight, but Charley Rose, Phil's English manager, cabled me that Philly yearned for my company, and thought that my presence would give him greater confidence. So I'm off.

"I think Phil will lick Stribling as sure as you're a foot high. Or are you a foot high? I will request the referee to make Stribling obey the rules laid down by the dear old Marquis of Queensbury, which prohibit all those strange wrestling holds devised by Willie, and which consider thumbings in the eye very middle class, indeed.

"I will caution Phil to be careful with William for the first few rounds, and will then send him out to knock him dead!"

"You mean send William out?" I inquired, cautiously.

"No, no, no, no, no!" cried Mr. Johnston. "I mean send Phil out. Good old Phillip! Yes, sir, I will send him out to knock William L. Stribling dead! D-E-A-D, dead! What do I care for the Southern vote?"

"Why, I remarked, horrified, "that would be murder!"

"I don't care!" replied Mr. Johnston, ferociously. "Dead, did-dee-ed-dead. DEAD!"

Horace Mann Victor

Horace Mann baseball team shut out Victory Field, 2 to 0, at Victory Field, Watertown, last evening.

The winners went into the league lead by the victory.

Huston fanned 11, while his battery mate, Cahill, threw out five runners at second and two at third, of which were birdies, and he ran down a 10-foot putt for a deuce at the third.

Joe Batchelder of Salem came from behind to beat Bill McPhail of Norfolk one up on the home green. McPhail made the turn with a two-hole advantage, but Batchelder unared birdies at the 11th, 13th and 14, which put him one up.

McPhail came through with a fine birdie at the 15th to even the match again only to drop one back at the 16th. Three putts at the 17th cost Batchelder the hole and they were on even terms going to the 18th. Batchelder played a sensational second shot from the rough to within 20 feet of the pin on the 18th green and won the hole with a 4 after McPhail had missed his putt which followed a fine shot from the trap.

Bill Blaney and Eddie Lowery had a fine match, the Brae-Burn golfer finally coming through with a 3 and 2 win. Birdies at the fourth and fifth holes gave Blaney a two-hole lead, but Lowery came back for a win at the sixth as a result of one of the most spectacular shots of the championship, for, from the bad rough well to the right of the green he came within three inches of holing out for a deuce.

Blaney was 2 up at the turn and by steady golf, except at the long 15th hole, he had a three-hole advantage with only two remaining holes to play.

WRIGHT WINS OVER GRASSE 6 AND 4

Massachusetts Amateur Championship

SEMI-FINAL ROUND
Wright vs. Ward.
Batchelder vs. Blaney.

By BILL GRIMES

Fred J. Wright, Jr., Albemarle, is playing Elmer Ward, Norfolk, and Joe Batchelder of Salem is out with Bill Blaney, Brae-Burn, this afternoon in the semi-final round of the Massachusetts amateur golf championship at the Salem Country Club.

Although Wright, defending champion, was off form, he had little trouble defeating Chick Grasse 6 and 4 in the quarter finals this morning. Wright was 39 to the turn, but was one under fours coming in for five holes.

Elmer Ward eliminated Emory Stratton of Brae Burn by shooting the best round of the day. Ward was out in 36 and needed three fours for a 70. The Batchelder-McPhail match was the best of the morning, the former player winning on the home green after a spectacular second shot form the rough.

Bill Blaney went out in 36 to be one up on Eddie Lowery, and was only two over fours for the seven inward holes.

After halving the first two holes, each of which was played in one over par with Grasse three-putting both greens, Wright took the lead at the short third hole, where Grasse caught the trap and the title-holder was on for the first time since the start of the championship.

After Wright had hit a beautiful tee shot down the fourth, Grasse's niece flew out of bounds and he dropped to two down.

Grasse passed up a fine opening at the fifth where Wright's tee shot caught the rough, from where he played out short of the green. Grasse, however, drunkenly his second shot, pulled his third and wound up with another six to lose the hole to Wright's par 3.

Wright was on nicely from the sixth tee while Grasse hooked an iron badly, his ball landing over by the seventh tee, and he dropped his fourth straight hole, the champion getting a par three.

A stymie put Grasse the seventh hole and he dropped to five down. However, he got one back at the eighth with a beautiful shot which cleared the woods and came up with a six.

Fine Shot From Trap Gives Grasse Half at 9th

A fine shot from the trap and one putt got Grasse a half at the ninth, but he was four down at the turn.

After they had halved a fourth in par figures, Grasse topped his second shot going to the eleventh after Wright had put a brassie shot on the back edge of the green. Grasse was still short with his third on the back to the left of the green and after he had made a beautiful approach, he missed the putt to lose the hole to a birdie four, the champion getting down with two putts.

Wright was on at the 12th but Grasse caught the trap, losing the hole to a par 3 and the champion was dormie 6.

Wright put his second shot over the 13th green and lost the hole to a four, but he ended the match at the 14th, where he was on and only about 15 feet from the cup with his opponent in the trap.

Ward Shoots Great Golf to Beat Stratton

Elmer Ward, Norfolk, teased an approximate 70 at Emory Stratton, Brae Burn, to enter the semi-finals this afternoon.

Although little comment has been made on Ward's game, he has been shooting better golf than any other contestant in the field since the qualifying round.

In the first round he was 73 and came back in the first match today, needing three 4's for a 70 against Stratton, who needed the same finish for a 74.

Ward had one bad hole, the eighth, where he topped his second shot and was still short of the green with his third. Other than that, he was in no trouble from start to finish.

He had no less than five 3's, two of which were birdies, and he ran

TITLE CHANGES HANDS AS SINGER MAULS MANDELL

Women Court Stars From Coast in Longwood Final

By JOHN GILLOOLY

It will be an All-California final in the women's invitation tennis singles tournament at the Longwood Cricket Club, Chestnut Hill, tomorrow.

For West triumphed over East in two semi-final matches this morning on the sun-browned courts at Longwood. Mrs. L. A. Harper, veteran court star from the Coast, eliminated Miss Virginia Hillearv of Philadelphia, allowing her but one game, 6-1, 6-love.

Mrs. Harper is a strategist of the courts who uses all the strokes in a finished manner. Miss Hillearv couldn't compete with the superb form that Mrs. Harper displayed this morning.

After the match was underway but a short time the outcome was inevitable and Mrs. Harper made quick work of Miss Hillearv.

Miss Marjorie Morrill of Dedham received her first defeat of the season at the hands of Miss Dorothy Weisel, another youthful court genius from the coast. Miss Weisel got off to an unsteady start and dropped the first set at 5—7, but she came back strong to win the second set at love, then to outplay Miss Morrill and capture the third set at 6—3 and the match.

California Pair Win Out in Doubles

Miss Marjorie Gladman and Miss Josephine Cruickshank, California doubles team, won their semi-finals match from a Boston combination, Mrs. William Endicott and Mrs. J. D. Corbiere, at 6-2, 6-4, thereby entering the doubles finals.

Sidney B. Wood declared himself finalist in the Longwood Bowl's singles championship by defeating Dick Murphy, Harvard freshman, in the first semifinal by the scores 6—3, 6—1, 6—1. Wood's experience and mastery of strokes proved too much for the small Crimson star who hails from Utica, N. Y.

Wood, after a hard fight in the first set, ran out a victory in short order.

Barry Wood, another Harvard star athlete, had dropped the first set of his match to Cliff Sutter of Tulane, 7—5, when the Sid Wood-Murphy struggle had been completed.

Miss Marjorie Gladman and Miss Majorie Gladman defeated Mrs. William Endicott and Mrs. J. Dallas Corbiere 6—2, 6—4.

Miss Virginia Hillearv and Miss Penny Anderson defeated Mrs. L. A. Harper and Miss Dorothy Weisel, 6—3, 6—4.

Notes of the Sandlots

All eight clubs in the Hub Twilight League, now hot after the second-half pennant, will be in action tonight.

Newton plays Mt. Hope at Newton Upper Falls, Notre Dame visits Revere, the Hopedales go to Hyde Park, from South Boston, shifted from the Greater Boston Twi circuit, makes its debut at Somerville playing under the old name of St. Augustines.

Al Ricci, two-sport star at Boston College, is hitting the ball hard for Hyde Park in the Hub Twi League. Ricci got three hits in his last appearance for his home-town team.

Walter Kelson, who went up to Pittsfield for a while, may soon be making another journey upgrade on the road to baseball fame. Kelson has been playing a fine game at first base and smacking consistently for Chatham in the Cape Cod League.

Fred Loftus of Malden Twi team and a resident of Concord is one real major league prospect in the Twilight League ranks. He showed this when he pitched Malden to the first half pennant giving Dorchester but four hits.

Freddy has been playing this type of ball for Malden all season and is now planning to be even more sensational during the second half with hopes of getting some big league magnate to loosen the strap on his bankroll next season.

Bill Boehner, former Boston College high pitcher and a freshman at Boston College last year, is doing well for the Madden Club of the Dorchester Twilight League. Bill plays first, pitches and bats in the cleanup position for his outfit.

'Twixt Tee and Cup

Fred J. Wright, Jr., will compete in the New England amateur championships at the Portland Country Club next month. Freddie won the New Englands at Worcester and has expressed a desire to repossess the title.

The fifth annual New England amateur championship is expected to be the best ever staged by that organization. The Portland Country Club is conditioning its course for the championship and promises that the players will find their layout one of the finest they have ever played.

The 190-yard seventh hole at the Portland Country Club is in a class by itself as a one-shooter. It is a water hole to an island green which will be responsible for an epidemic of buck fever during the qualifying round.

Portland has what Donald Ross terms the best par 5 hole in the country. This hole is 575 yards in length and the third shot is over a pond. No player has ever been on this green in two but critics in this vicinity are betting that Jack Healy will be home with his second.

If Jack Henly, the Lowell long hitter, enters the New Englands, and there is every reason to believe that he will be at Portland, the Pine Tree State enthusiasts are going to glimpse at the longest hitter they have ever seen.

How is this for good news? There are four water holes at the Portland Country Club.

"Derby" Dan Horan, the former Massachusetts State handicapper, is anxiously awaiting the arrival of his Boston friends at the Portland Country Club. The N. E. P. G. O. will be at Portland next Monday, and the farseeing amateurs are rushing around signing up professional partners in order to get in a few practice rounds before the New Englands.

Runyon Says Mandell Took Bad Trouncing

By DAMON RUNYON

New York, July 18 (US)—Like a sudden blow from a short-handled axe, Al Singer's left hook chopped against the chin of Sammy Mandell and down went Mandell almost before the opening bell of the lightweight championship battle had ceased echoing through the half empty stands of the Yankee Stadium last night.

One minute and 46 seconds from the starting gong, and after three knockdowns, Mandell was counted out, and Singer, a Jewish lad of 21, from the Bronx, was champion of the world. It was possibly a record knockout in a title fight.

There were some boos from the skeptical in the sparse crowd of perhaps 35,000 as Mandell was afterwards led from the ring by his seconds, but the slender Italian from Rockford, Ill., took a savage beating before he fell for the fourth and last time, stretched out flat on his back, his eyes staring up at the lights overhead.

Singer Was 2-1 Favorite to Win

Singer had entered the ring 2 to 1 favorite in the betting, with a world of Singer money begging to be taken along Broadway, and with scarcely a peseta for Mandell in sight.

These odds against a champion of the world on a boy with little over two years' ring experience had aroused the suspicions of the over-suspicious New York ring wormis, especially as they were offered almost from the time the match was made. The odds went as high as 2½ and 3 to 1 during the past week.

The price was an "overlay"—unnatural—reasoned the ringworms. But the knockout itself seemed very, very realistic. It was, indeed, a savage, brutal thing as it appeared to these not-always-believing eyes. Mandell had taken a couple of feeble, futile pokes at Singer with his once rapier-like left hand when Singer's short hook clipped him on the chin.

One of the elbow-the-shoulder blows of the fight was a terrific punch that Singer landed in Mandell's stomach, a left hook that Al quickly brought up to Mandell's jaw. It was this double punch that dropped Sammy for the count of two. Mandell acted hurt, and looked hurt as he staggered around the ring to the final knockout.

As the counting out time-keeper whacked his 10th lick with the mallet against the ring, Singer rushed over to assist the prostrate Mandell. He got to the Italian even before Sammy's handlers, and helped him to his corner, where Mandell quickly revived. He was able to walk from the ring.

BRAVES 'FARM' OUT OF LEAGUE

Allentown, Pa., July 18—Adjourning at 2:30 a. m., following a meeting in the American Hotel in this city, President W. E. Carey of the Eastern League announced that he had been advised by Judge Emil Fuchs, owner of the Boston Braves, that he would abandon the Providence franchise in the Eastern League at the close of the 10th—tomorrow.

At the same time it was announced that George H. Weiss, president of the New Haven club, had wired the league president late last night that unless he could secure financial assistance from the league he would stop operations.

Mr. Carey said that he had been advised later by Harry H. Hopkins, business manager of the Providence club, that he had been advised to withdraw his club from the league Saturday night.

Drop in Attendance Caused Profs. to Quit

New Haven, Ct., July 18 (AP)—A sharp drop in attendance at the home games of the New Haven Profs after they had lost leadership of the league to Allentown, today was blamed for the action of club officials in withdrawing from the Eastern League.

New Haven was nosed out at the close of the first half of the league's split season two weeks ago when Providence won the crucial game. Thereafter the home town fans were conspicuous by their absence from Savin Rock ball park.

A part payment of salaries due for June was not forthcoming until Wednesday of this week and the Profs, a hard-hitting club, went into a distinct batting slump.

MANDELL IS BETTER MAN, SAYS HYPE

By HYPE IGOE

New York, July 18—It looked like the gaggo.

It wasn't in the cards that a young boxer could clip a genius with the first punch.

It wasn't in the cards that nine out of 10 fans should have arisen and declared themselves.

I will not to my dying day believe that the man who stood off Jimmy McLarnin for 35 rounds could ever have been reached with a slow left hook to the chin.

I hate to say that it was a playdoodle. I hate to say that after Sammy Mandell wrung my hand in the weighing room at 2 o'clock yesterday that he would be a party of such as is spoken of.

Believes Mandell Can Still Beat Singer

I thought that Mandell looked like a busted beast when he weighed in. I have been looking at those illfed eyes for going on 20 years. Never in all my experience have I seen such a stare. That is the only thing, in fairness, standing between an honest-to-goodness effort and a complete "Barney."

Why should Mandel "fake"? It was Singer, in the anticipation of victory, who looked like a bluefish around the gills. I'll admit that I'm a bit huddled. I'll admit that I will not listen to any excuse why Mandell should have been dropped by Al's punkeet hand, a left hook to the jaw. If McLarnin had speared him, I would not have been so nettled. I admired Mandell as a champion.

I look back on it now and remember that the first thing Singer did after the fight was to say:

"It was my lucky star, Mr. Igoe. I just knew nother could not have been wrong."

The end came like a blizzard dropped into the heart of Death Valley, but not before Sammy bewildering, but not so puzzling that it didn't make folks around me arise and say:

Ga! I hated to hear that. I hated myself for saying that Mandell would retain the middleweight title, when I knew he wasn't gaited that way.

$45,382.12 to Mandell; Singer Gets $19,449.48

New York, July 18 (AP)—Sammy Mandell was $45,382.12 richer today, although losing his lightweight boxing title to youthful Al Singer at the Yankee Stadium last night. That amount represented 25 per cent of the net gate receipts, which totaled $129,663.36.

Singer's share of the gate was 15 per cent, or $19,449.48. Loser's 449.48. The gross receipts for the fight, however, were disappointing, being $258,585.00. Deduction of the State and federal taxes left the net receipts far below the expectations of Manager Jack Garfield, officials.

The Garden said today that the official paid attendance was 27,742.

FIRPO TO FIGHT IN U. S. SOON

New York, July 18 (AP)—Luis Angel Firpo, the "Wild Bull of the Pampas," was one of the first to congratulate Justo Suarez, Argentine fighter, who won from Jess Glick in a preliminary bout at the Singer-Mandell go last night.

Firpo told De Forest that he was found speakers to many thousands and that he might fight there. "You will be my trainer," Firpo told De Forest.

After he had defeated Glick, Suarez spoke over a transcontinental hook-up to the office of La Critera, Buenos Aires, where his impressions of his bout were carried by loud speakers to many thousands gathered for three blocks about the office of the newspaper. It was estimated La Critera paid about $2500 for the arrangement.

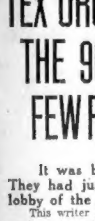
Rickard Asked Jack Dempsey to Carry Carpentier

TEX URGED TIGER TO PERMIT THE 90,000 FANS TO SEE FEW ROUNDS OF FIGHTING

By JACK CONWAY

It was back in 1927. It was after midnight. They had just turned out the bright lights in the lobby of the Astor Hotel on Broadway, New York.

This writer stood in the lobby when Tex Rickard, greatest sport promoter that ever lived, aproached. Tex was swinging a cane with his right hand. He was quite happy and looked it. He had attended a big sporting dinner and had listened to various speakers tell about the progress of athletics. And when you discussed million-dollar sporting events you must necessarily talk about Rickard. He had made such things possible.



Jack Conway

Rickard stopped to talk with me. He was in a reminiscent mood that night.

"There isn't any truth to these stories that I asked Dempsey to carry Tunney in the fight in Philadelphia," said Tex as he swung his cane jauntily. "I did go into Jack's dressing room before the fight, but only to ask him to hurry and get into the ring. The clouds were filled with rain and I wanted to get the fight out of the way before the cloudburst came.

"I'll be in the ring in a jiffy and it won't last long once the gong sounds," Dempsey said to me.

"Dempsey thought Tunney would be easy for him. Billy Gibson had gone to California and sold Jack on the match. All I had to do was to sign the thing up.

"Only once did I ask Dempsey to carry anybody. That was at Jersey City when the old Tiger fought Carpentier.

"When I first started to make that match, I didn't dream it would go as big as it did. I signed Dempsey and Carpentier on guarantees. Jack got $300,000 and Carpentier $200,000.

DEMPSEY GOT $300,000

"Jack Kearns thought he was giving me a licking when I signed to kick in with $300,000 for Dempsey.

"It was agreed that Dempsey's end of the purse would be posted with Bob Edgren. I put the money up with Bob, who put it in a safe deposit box at the Hotel Belmont here in New York. After the bout Bob turned the jack over to Kearns and Dempsey.

"I staged the show in the Polo Grounds in July 2, 1921, at Boyle's Thirty Acres.

"When I first started building the place, I felt if I had 60,000 seats the arena would be large enough to care for all who wished to see the show.

"Hype Igoe, sports writer, told me I was underestimating the show. He urged that I build an arena that could seat 90,000 persons. And after the rush started I took Hype's tip.

"People came from all parts of the world to see that bout. Gathered around were the social leaders of America and of Europe.

"The international touch of the match had caught the public fancy. Carpentier was also a war hero, while Dempsey had been attacked on account of his lack of a war record. This all tended to add fire to the match.

"While the preliminary bouts were going on, I wandered around the ringside sections. The place was cluttered up with millionaires and social leaders. Some of them had never seen a boxing bout before. Thousands of ladies, dressed in all of their finery, were there.

"I then started to think of what was going to happen when the bout started. I knew Dempsey was a great fighter and could knock out any man in the world. He was also a regular heavyweight, weighing around 190 pounds.

"Carpentier, on the other hand, was only a frail young man weighing 170 pounds.

TIGER ALMOST KAYOED

"I felt Dempsey would slaughter the Frenchman. If he did it quickly I feared it would hurt the boxing game. What would all of those fine people think as Dempsey waded into Carpentier and punched his brains out?

"So I rushed back to the dressing rooms. I got hold of Dempsey. I explained to Jack about the type of people at the ringside and my fear he would hurt the boxing game if he knocked Carpentier out with a few punches. I asked him to let the Frenchman go a few rounds. He agreed to save my show.

"I sat in a ringside seat as the bout began. I watched the men go through the first round.

"Came the second round with all of its drama. Dempsey was taking things easy when Carpentier tossed a terrific right-hand punch from the floor. He leaped into the air with the punch and every bit of power in his body was behind the blow.

"The smash landed on Dempsey's chin. The champion staggered and then fell into a clinch and held on to Carpentier for dear life. Jack was on the verge of a knockout. He weathered the storm, came through the third round and knocked Carpentier out in the fourth.

"Back in the dressing room after the bout, Dempsey told me he would never again carry anybody a second longer than was necessary.

"The Frenchman almost knocked me dead with that punch in the second round," said Dempsey.

I remarked to Rickard how the so-called boxing authorities were telling Dempsey at his camp at Saratoga, N. Y., to box Firpo for five or six rounds, wear him down and then go after a knockout.

"I'll knock him out with the first punch if I can," Dempsey told the mob. "I don't believe in boxing anybody. My stock in trade is aggressiveness and a punch. I'm going to knock out this South American as quickly as possible and keep the title in the United States."

This statement explained the way Dempsey left his corner in the first round of the Firpo bout. There were nine knockdowns jammed into that match, but as Jack scored the final one his battle plan was perfect.

Jack Conway will have another story on "The Inside of the Boxing Racket" in tomorrow's Boston Evening American. He will give the real story of the Dempsey-Firpo bout.

Umpire Fires on Critical Ball Fan

Lyerly, Ga., July 18 (AP)—"Ragging" the umpires, a summer sport throughout this broad land, does not seem to be so popular here now. Dick Gilbert, a negro who sometimes rules the local baseball diamond as final arbiter, has a way all his own for making the fans behave.

In the course of a game, Dick made a decision that seemed fair to him. But the fans felt differently and broke loose with hisses, hoots and catcalls.

Three Honolulu Race Entries Reach Port

Honolulu, July 18 (AP)—Three of the four yachts which began a race from San Pedro rested at anchor in Honolulu Harbor today. The race committee was awaiting word of the fourth boat, the Mollieu.

With its handicap of 73 hours, 18 minutes and 30 second, the Mollieu still had a chance of taking first place in elapsed time.

CODMAN TO SEEK TITLE IN SINGLES

Among the many outstanding oarsmen of the country who will participate in the national championship regatta on the Charles river basin on August 2, to be held in connection with the tercentenary celebration, is Russell Codman, Jr., noted Harvard oarsman and now engaged in the real estate business in this city.

Codman has never lost interest in the rowing pastime since he left Harvard in 1919, but has constantly kept in training and last year rowed in the single scull race at the American Henley in Philadelphia.

A several-time winner of the New England championship, he will enter the national regatta in the single sculls contest. He has a powerful stroke and is one of the most graceful oarsmen in the country.

Codman Practices Daily for Meet

Codman may be seen almost daily in the Charles river with his trainer, William Haines, coach of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology navy.

Yesterday, scores watched him in action as he rowed away from the Union Boat Club final a half hour before noon. His latest time trial shows a 10-length improvement since he started training under Haines.

Codman and Haines have mapped out a careful training schedule for the former Harvard oarsman, whose home is on Marlborough st., Back Bay. Within the next few weeks he will be near his top form so that he will be in excellent condition at the opening of the regatta.

Canadian Stars to Compete for Honors

Contesting for honors in the national sculls championship will be some of the best scullmen of the United States and Canada, many of whom became famous as members of varsity college crews during their college days.

Thousands of persons are expected to see the regatta, which will be one of the major events of the observance of the tercentenary year.

BETWEEN INNINGS

By JOE CASHMAN

Grover Cleveland Alexander, greatest National League pitcher of modern times, has reached his baseball journey's end.

His once mighty arm worn out after 23 years of toil, and his once dauntless spirit broken, he stands suspended by the Dallas club of the Texas League for not living up to training rules.

Waivers have been asked on him, and even if he is claimed by some other club, which is unlikely, the final chapter of his most brilliant career is completed. For he admits that the arm which so long set down the world's best hitters can no longer fool Class A batters.

There comes a time in the life of every athlete when he must cease competing, but when that moment arrives for a figure as outstanding as Alexander, he should be able to retire to the fireside and spend his remaining days in peace and comfort, dreaming of his greatest triumphs.

Old Alex Broke, Meets Sad End

Old Alex car return to his home in Nebraska, but that's about all. He's as good as broke and he prepares for his last trip to the showers. He'll have little time for resting and reminiscing, if he is to keep the wolf from the door.

It's a sad ending to a glorious career and organized ball must share with the player the blame for it.

It doesn't matter that old Pete made plenty of money when in his prime and wouldn't have any financial worries now, if he hadn't unwisely squandered it.

Neither it is matter that he always took his fun where and when he found it, and by so doing killed his chances of working on as a manager or scout in the big show.

Despite all his faults, he stayed in good enough shape to win more than 25 games a season for eight years, score more victories than any other hurler in the league's history, win pennants for both the Phils and the Cards, give the latter world's championship and enrich several magnates.

The old veteran doesn't ask anything of baseball as he is passing out, but he deserves something from the sport for which he has done so much, as does every great player who isn't very well fixed in worldly goods when he is done.

Club Owners Should Take Care of Stars

The clubs do contribute to the fund which keeps former players out of the poor house, and the American League cares for a few needy cases, but no player has any guarantee that no matter how much he does for the game, or how much he adds to a magnate's fortune, he won't be down and almost out when his race is run, as is Alexander today.

Many more youths would decide on baseball as a career if cases like Alexander's weren't cropping up every so often, and it would be profitable for as well as honorable of the club owners to devise some scheme to avoid such unfortunate occurrences.

If they can afford to pay princely salaries to countless executives, they certainly can afford to take care of hired men who give the best years of their lives to the pastime and make all the money their bosses pile up, if any.

Malden Withdraws From Twi League

The withdrawal of the Malden team from the Twilight league circuit was announced last night by Manager George Atkinson. As a result, the contest scheduled for tonight with Dorchester to decide the first half championship of the league was called off.

The difficulty hinges around two Malden players, one of whom is Fred Loftus, Malden pitcher, who are claimed by Quincy, who played early in the season against Dorchester.

ALLISON IS VICTOR OVER DE STEFANI

Anteuil, France, July 18 (AP)—Coming back after losing the first two sets and trailing at 1—5 in the fifth, Wilmer Allison of Austin, Texas, scored a dramatic victory for the United States in the intersone Davis Cup tennis final today, defeating Georgio DeStefani of Italy, 4—6, 7—9, 6—4, 8—6, 10—8.

Allison, a heavy favorite before the match, found himself battled to a standstill in the early stages of the match, but rallied with remarkable courage. Time after time he was on the verge of defeat at the hands of the ambidextrous Italian player, but in time fought his way out of danger with a dazzling display of courage and skillful tennis.

De Stefani sprang a sprang a surprise today by winning the first two sets, 6—4 and 9—7.

Allison, recent conqueror of Henri Cochet, led at 5—1 in the second set, only to lose it. Allison won the third set, 6—4, and the fourth set, 8—6, squaring the match.

De Stefani led 4—1 in the fifth set Allison, fighting an uphill battle after losing the first three games of the final set, tied the score at 5 all.

Allison won the fifth set, 10—8, winning the match.

For three hours the fortunes of war ebbed and flowed, and when Allison, on the short end of a 5-5 count in the final set, began his sensational push for victory from the gallery rose en masse, shouting and applauding.

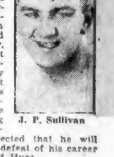
Had the long deuced set it was Allison finally who came through to give the United States the opening point in this series of five matches for the right to challenge the French.

The second match got under way immediately after and Baron Humberg de Morpurgo, Italian ace, won the first set from George Lott of Chicago, 9—7.

Lott won the second set, 9—7, squaring the match.

Lott won the third set, 10-8, to take a 3-1 lead in sets.

HUNT PICKED TO BEAT PANTALEO



J. P. Sullivan

Babe Hunt, giant young heavyweight from Olds, has been installed a 10-to-8 favorite to whip the undefeated Paul Pantaleo of Chicago in their 10-round battle at Braves Field next Monday night.

Pantaleo, the best heavyweight of Italian extraction ever developed in this country, has won 29 out of 31 professional bouts by the knockout route, and has never been decisively beaten by a brilliant ring record, however, it is expected that he will suffer the first defeat of his career at the hands of Hunt.

The eight round semifinal bout between John Nick Sullivan, middleweight champion of Ireland, and Eddie Piazza, young Italian middleweight star, is expected to be a slugging match.

Three eight round bouts between heavyweights in the Diamond Belt elimination series will precede the two feature bouts. Steve Gorman of South Boston will meet Danny Regan of Gardner; Pat O'Flaherty, another Gardner boy, will box heavyweight, will tackle Jack Dudley of Worcester, and Jack Moulton of Charlestown will face Joe Cabana of Chelsea.

French Proves Pirate Box Star

ACE CHALKS UP 19TH WIN OF SEASON

By JOE CASHMAN

Whenever LeRoy Mahaffey, star rookie hurler of the champion Athletics, wins a ball game, which happens to be quite often, fandom is always informed that he once toiled in Pittsburgh.

The idea being, of course, to impress upon the public that the Pirates made one of baseball's most costly blunders when they let the Mackian ace loose.

The Bucos don't deny it, if asked. They merely point to Larry French, whom they received in exchange for Mahaffey and let you decide for yourself whether or no they received the worst of the swap.

After watching mister French, who throws from the portside, turn back our Braves in the third game of the current series at the Wigwam, we are inclined to doubt that Barney Dreyfus, owner of the Smoky City outfit, lost anything when he let Mahaffey loose.

The Athletic hero is one of the best-looking hurlers to make a big league bow in several seasons, but French looks every bit as good and he has been a winner for the Pirates, something Mahaffey never was.

French's Win Yesterday Was 10th of Season

French's win over the Tribe was his tenth of the year, which is three more than Mahaffey has turned in for the Macks. The Pirate has lost 11 while Mahaffey has lost only three, but if the latter worked as often and with a sixth-place instead of a first-place club it is a question whether he would be any more effective than the Corsair southpaw.

French has hurled three shutout games to date, which is more than any other hurler in the circuit has to his credit. He has also pitched a two-hit game and several of his defeats were due more to poor support than any weakness on his part.

The Braves found him yesterday for 13 hits, just as many as the Pirates made, and were able to score but two runs. In every inning they had runners on, but managed only in two. Sixteen of them were left stranded on the racks.

Only a great pitcher can hurl the kind of ball in the pinches that French did.

It's not often that a team makes a deal which neither strengthens or weakens it, but the Pirates pray to have made one when they sent Mahaffey out to the Coast for French.

At any rate, they don't have to make any apologies for the swap.

Braves Find Pirates Much Changed Team

The Braves expected to find the Pirates stronger than ever before on this visit. They have not been disappointed. The enemy, with the Waner brothers, Traynor and Barnhart back in the lineup, is a fearsome formidable as it was when last in the Hub and has taken two out of three to date from the Warriors, who showed seven of its best ten games.

The Bucos are now but one-half game removed from the fifth place Phillies, which means that the latter must split the remaining two games to avoid dropping a peg.

That this is easily enough hits every afternoon to win but it isn't making runs, which happens to be necessary.

With Harry "Socks" Seibold due to pitch today and Bobby Smith on the job to toil tomorrow, however, the locals ought to get going again.

By GEORGE W. GRIMM

Twelve New England A. A. A. U champions are out to defend their titles on Sunday afternoon at the annual track and field championships of the New England A. A. A. U. to be held at Merrymount Park, Quincy, under the auspices of the Quincy Massachusetts Bay Colony tercentenary committee.

This meet will bring out the cream of local track and field stars, who hope for the best with stiff competition. Monty Wells, former Dartmouth star wearing the colors of the Boston Athletic Association and holder of the high and low hurdle championships, will compete in the same two events.

The other champions who will seek to hold their titles are Arthur Sager, B. A. A., javelin champion; George Plansky, B. A. A., discus; George Martin, pole vault; Kenneth White, hop-step-and-jump; J. Monty Wells and George Morin are the only pair to hold two titles, Wells in the hurdles and Morin the 100-yard and 220-yard champion

Many Entries in 100-Yard Dash Event

All events, however, will afford the fans plenty of thrills. In the 100-yard dash there are over three dozen starters, all with plenty of class. The champion, George Morin, will face such performers as H. and M. Yavner of the Boston U., Donald P. Feit of Melrose, Alfred Morin of Spencer; J. A. Falt of the B. A. A., and Kenton Farrell of Brockton.

The three-mile walk will find E. G. Wilson and G. W. Bell of the B. A. A., Harry Clark and A. A. Pasquale of the West End K. of C., and Don Martori, George Jamieson, Phil Knopf and Peter Laubenheimer of Dorchester Club and a half dozen others.

Donald Fleet, crack Boston College freshman star runner, will run in the 220-yard dash. The rest of the stars, numbering 30 or more, will be forced to the limit to catch his heels.

A. W. Morang of Northeastern, New England and Eastern Intercollegiate high jumping champion, will compete with stiff competition in the high jump.

Three worthy performers, Gail Robinson, George Plansky and Joseph Porter, the latter of Brockton, will compete in an exceptionally large field.

The quarter mile has Donald Fleet, Frank Shea of Lynn; W. J. Hanson, Dana Smith, F. E. Cummings of the B. A. A.; R. Thompson of Boston and a flock of other performers.

B. C. Star to Run in Half Mile

Robert Jordan of Boston College and E. A. A. will be in the half mile with J. W. Lang, another B. A. A. runner and member of the Dartmouth track team, starting their annual track fields.

Seventy-five starters are expected to get away in the six-mile run with the champion John Holmy of the B. A. A. This should be another classy race with Jimmy Henigan, Gus Barbato, John Kelly of Medford, Harold Gotlin, William Mora and William Zepp, the latter three with the Dorchester Club; John Gilbert, Julius Ober, T. F. McDonough and Russell Jeilson of the Boston A. A.

CAMBRIDGE A. L. SHOW TONIGHT

Cambridge Post, A. L., will stage its twice postponed amateur tournament tonight in Russell Field, North Cambridge, before the largest crowd that has ever attended an amateur tourney there.

The crowd will be swelled by hundreds of indies, who will be admitted free if accompanied by escorts. Plenty of free parking space will be provided, and the Legion band of 30 pieces will play before and between bouts.

Novices will compete in the 112-pound class, and the 126, 135, 147 and 160-pound classes will be open to all comers. Every class is filled to the top with the names of star entrants, including more than a dozen Cambridge youngsters, and the fighting is expected to be furious, with more than 35 bouts scheduled. The receipts will be devoted entirely to charity.

Boston Port in Review

By CARL MORRISON

Some local coal dealers are disturbed because of the large amounts of Russian coal entering the harbor. They feel that this is unfair competition with American firms, as the imported coal is sold at lower price. These dealers are considering launching a campaign to induce people to patronize the American product. Some discussion of this was made at the recent convention in Swampscott of New England Coal Dealers' Association.

TODAY'S WHO'S WHO

The subject of today's harbor sketch is Raymond Hanson, in charge of the customs brokerage affairs of Patterson, Wylde & Co.

"Ray" is a popular young harborite, who is known as the best "southpaw" bowler in the steamship league. He lives in Marblehead and has a fondness for yachting, for golfing, bowling, and for football, in his school days at Marblehead high school he was a member of the championship football eleven.

Hanson has been with his firm for 10 years, and has a wide acquaintance. He is a sincere booster for the harbor, and is a member of the Foreign Commerce Club and the Redmen. His greatest hobby is his year-old son.

FISH RECORDS

All records for a single day for fish receipts at the Boston Fish Pier were broken yesterday. The enormous receipt of fresh mackerel from a fleet of 23 seiners was about 1,085,000 pounds. The local markets could not absorb all the fish, so many ships went to Gloucester to unload, where the fish will be salted or canned. Local market prices took a marked drop.

BRITISH LOYALTY

State streeters were commenting favorably upon the enterprise and loyalty of the British embassy in showing its colors when one of its naval vessels was in port. Local shipping concerns, many of whom are indifferent to putting out flags of their own lines, may well learn a few lessons in national loyalty and courtesy.

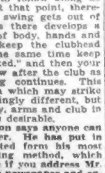
GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON
Golf's Greatest Teacher

It is easy enough to put the left wrist into a "cocked" position in the address; keeping it there during your back swing may be found to be more difficult. You will discern a tendency this wrist has of straightening itself out just after you start your back swing. This results from your intention to keep the club-head close to the ground. Now if you bend the head down by letting out your wrist, you may be sure that your body is failing to follow along as it should, and at that point, therefore, your back swing gets out of proportion, since there develops a lack of unison of body, hands and arms. Instead, keep the clubhead down, and at the same time keep your wrist "cocked," and then your left should follow after the club as the back swing continues. This causes an action which may strike you as astonishingly different, but it will keep body, arms and club in unison, which is desirable.



(Chester Horton says anyone can be a good putter. He has put in printed, illustrated form his most successful putting method, which will be sent free if you address Mr. Horton care this newspaper and enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.)

AIR FLIGHT SCHEDULE ISSUED

By GEORGE HAMLIN

The increase of air travel from Boston Municipal Airport reaching its present position of importance is officially recognized by the Aviation Bureau of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, with the issuance of the first consolidated flight schedule.

Theodore G. Holcombe, manager of the Bureau, is directly responsible for the schedule, and states that it will be kept up to date every month with changes made during the previous four weeks, and additions or depletions of service noted.

Holcombe declares that copies of the schedule may be obtained at his office in the Chamber building, from any operating company at the airport, or by writing this department of the Boston Evening American.

Frank D. Le Man, former sales manager for East Coast Aircraft Corp., is the proud owner of all the classifications on his transport license up to the large multi-engined air liners, according to Federal Inspector Bob Hoyt.

Using a Moth, in the light, open cockpit class; a Curtiss Robin, in the medium cabin class, and the Keystone Commutor, in the amphibian-land plane class, Le Man satisfied Inspector Hoyt that he was ok, and was granted his ticket with all the ratings.

Walter Rogers and Gus Ham, operating the Davis monoplane agency at the local airport, are planning to fly the Kinner engined Davis, owned by the Norton brothers, Joe La Blonde engined job in the events at Dennison Airport tomorrow and Sunday.

Tercentenary Pilgrimages—No. 34

THE DILLAWAY HOUSE, ROXBURY

Progress has destroyed nearly all the landmarks of importance in Roxbury. The Dillaway house, situated in Eliot sq., at 183 Roxbury st., has escaped, however.

This house was built in 1752 by Rev. Oliver Peabody, who occupied it as a parsonage. Afterwards other ministers took possession, among them Rev. Amos Adams and Dr. Potts. Col. Heath once owned the property, but finally it passed into the hands of C. K. Dillaway and since has been known by his name.

HOME OF PATRIOTS

The edifice is associated with the early history of Roxbury. The inhabitants were all parsons and ardent patriots. The first church of Roxbury stood in Eliot sq. where now stands a neat white church.

The house was long the home of Charles Dillaway, revered for his work in connection with the public schools.

It has been written:

"This fine old mansion . . . is still of such beauty and dignity that it is well worth a long journey to see. Its gambrel roof is of unusual type, very high and steep, and yet so perfectly proportioned that it gives an air of stateliness to the whole mansion."

SHELTERED SOLDIERS

During the Revolution, Gen. Thomas and his officers were quartered here. From its upper windows they witnessed the battle of Bunker Hill on June 17 and the burning of Charlestown.

Nearby in the square is the old "Parting Stone," one side of which directed travelers to Cambridge and the other to Dedham and Rhode Island.

Rev. Thomas Weld was the first pastor of the church for which the parsonage was erected. He came over in the William and Francis and was the founder of the Roxbury Latin School. The church was built in 1632 and was used as a town hall. Subsequent buildings have been erected on the same spot, so that a continuous record exists from that date. The first church was a rude log cabin. John Eliot, the "Apostle to the Indians," ministered from 1632 to 1690.

Eliot sq. is easily reached by the Boston Elevated system.

Tomorrow— Samuel Sanderson House, Lexington.

THREE HURT IN AUTO CRASH

Gullage, Jr., of Somerville, and his wife, Doris, and his daughter, Audrey, eight, were injured today when their automobile was in collision with a truck at Somerville ave. and Medford st., Somerville. Mrs. Gullage, suffering multiple contusions and a possible concussion of the brain, was removed to Central Hospital.

Patrolman Gullage was cut about the face and Audrey suffered minor lacerations.

The policeman was en route to Dilboy Field, where he was to have played on the Somerville police ball nine against the Melrose police team. Herbert N. Holden, of Bay View ave., Quincy, was the truck driver.

VANISHES WITH $1000 SAVINGS

After drawing $1000 from a savings bank and telling the cashier he was going on a trip to Ireland, John Beamish, 48, of Medford st., Malden, dropped from sight yesterday, according to a report of his wife to the police today.

Mrs. Beamish said she knew nothing of any plans for a trip to Ireland. Police of New England cities and towns were asked to aid. Beamish is five feet nine, 150 pounds, with a fair complexion, brown eyes, mixed gray hair and has a scar on his chin.

Ex-Officer Held on Threat to Kill

Philadelphia, July 18 (AP)—A former rookie policeman was arrested early today near the home of Director of Public Safety Lemuel B. Schofield, after he told a policeman on guard there that he was "out to bump Schofield off."

RAID 'VICTIM' TELLS OF 'PROMISE'

Always Expecting Police at the Tremont St. Place; No Liquor There, He Says

David J. ("Beano") Breen, a witness today at the hearing on his and James Harmon's petition for an injunction to halt police raids on their place at 358-358A Tremont st., testified that Supt. Michael H. Crowley yesterday promised him he would not be "molested" in future.

The promise Breen explained, referred to alleged interference by the police with his private affairs, and was not a promise that there would be no more liquor raids on the Tremont st. building.

Breen gave David A. Marshall, the master who is to decide on the facts at issue, a vivid account of the way policemen, according to his story, have been "hounding" him.

'RESPECTS' POLICE

"You don't like the police, do you?" asked Asst. Corporation Counsel Leo Schwartz, when he got a chance to question the witness.

"I respect them," parried Breen.

"I am always expecting the police raiders, in spite of the fact that I do not sell liquor there."

Then he launched his recital of the circumstances that led to his injunction application, and more especially to a special visit of complaint yesterday to Superintendent Crowley.

"The police broke down the doors whether they had warrants or not. It made no difference about the warrants," he said.

"Yesterday I went to see the superintendent and told him I was being molested by the police and watched all the time, and I wanted it stopped until some real charge was made against me.

"I told him I had been forced to move from the hotel where I lived because of numerous anonymous telephone calls and because the police were questioning bellhops, maids and other employes about me.

CROWLEY'S PROMISE

"I also told Supt. Crowley that a short time ago I met my son at the Back Bay station—he was coming home from school—and drove with him out through the Gallivan boulevard.

"Another car drove past me and cutting in, forced me up on an embankment. Three policemen got out of that car and they flashed a light and demanded my registration and license.

"'What's the idea?' I asked them, and one replied: 'Your car answers the description of a stolen car.' But another one of the policemen said, 'You know what we want, Beano.'

"Supt. Crowley asked me if I ever carried liquor in the car and I told him, 'No.' 'Can I depend on that?' he asked, and I said, 'Yes.' Supt. Crowley then said I wouldn't be molested in the future."

DOORS NOT REINFORCED

Breen yesterday had the satisfaction of showing that the doors smashed and taken from his and James J. Harmon's place were just of ordinary kind and not reinforced. The hearing was adjourned to inspect several at City Prison and Lagrange st. station.

Fix Wife's Bail at $20,000

RICHARDS' WIFE HELD IN JAIL

Judge Thomas Dowd in municipal court today set bail at $20,000 in the case of Mrs. Dorothy Richards, wife of Albert Richards, alleged jewel thief captured at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel Tuesday night. She is accused of having burglars' tools in her possession when arrested at the Hotel Statler.

The case was continued until Tuesday, when charges of breaking and entering and larceny against her husband will also be given a preliminary hearing. Both are in Charles St. Jail.

Boston police were notified by Chicago authorities that Richards is wanted on nine burglary charges in that city and defaulted $30,000 bail there. They also communicated with New York police regarding safety deposit vault in Mrs. Richards' name in a Broadway bank.

To Grill Roxbury Man in Chinese Slaying

Police Inspectors John A. Dorsey and George Agiusta today at the request of Everett police, took into custody Hong King Yuan, alias Harry Yen, for questioning in connection with the slaying of Wong Cy June, Everett laundryman, on June 6.

Yuan, 27, is employed at a laundry in Roxbury. At police headquarters he denied having been arrested before, but police said he was on parole from Concord reformatory where it is alleged he was sent after a previous long war case.

Scores Shaken Up in Cape Railroad Crash

Scores of persons were shaken up when a New Haven passenger train bound from Boston to Hyannis, crashed into a freight at Yarmouth and demolished two cars today.

The passenger train swung, unlocked on switch, ran on to a side track, and struck the last two cars of the freight.

ARMSTRONG IS GIVEN FREE HAND WITH RECORDS

Hanrahan to Hyde Park, McGrath to Joy St. and Lieut. McKinnon to Headquarters

In two general orders which came as a surprise, Police Commissioner Hultman today relieved Chief Inspector Ainsley C. Armstrong from his duties in the Bureau of Criminal Investigation and transferred Capt. John J. Hanrahan from Division 3 to Division 18, Hyde Park.

The commissioner stated that the chief inspector is to inaugurate a new system of record keeping throughout the police department.

Capt. Hanrahan's transfer from the Joy st. station, to which he was assigned earlier this year, is said to have been made at his own request.

"The records of the department are not sufficient and not kept in a uniform manner," Commissioner Hultman said in his order, which read in part:

"Chief Inspector Ainsley C. Armstrong is hereby relieved from all other duties and assigned to investigate and report in regard to establishing a complete system of records for the entire department.

RECORDS IN CHAOS

"This shall include all records from the station houses and other units to the commissioner's office and all other reports and records which are now kept in the department.

Asst. Corp. Counsel Leo Schwartz recently termed the condition of records in the office of former Commissioner Wilson as "chaotic."

Armstrong has been a member of the Bureau of Criminal Investigation for 20 years, being promoted from captain when former Chief Inspector John R. McGarr, now dead, retired several years ago.

M'GRATH TO JOY ST

It was learned that Commissioner Hultman, after taking office, found the records maintained by Armstrong were the most complete in the entire department, and that the system was the chief inspector's own.

By his transfer the chief inspector does not lose his rating or standard of pay.

Capt. Hanrahan whose transfer is effective at roll call next Monday morning, will be succeeded by Capt. John McGrath of Headquarters, who up to the time of the promotion of Deputy Supt. James A. McDevitt, was a lieutenant at Division 3.

LIEUTENANT'S OWN MEN

Lieutenant Joseph McKinnon of Division 4, Lagrange st., under the terms of the same general order, goes to headquarters to be acting captain in charge at night, in place of McGrath. McKinnon is second on the list of eligibles for captaincies.

The change at Station 3 gives Commissioner Hultman a complete array of commanders of his own appointing in the divisions of major importance, for the first time since he assumed office. These stations are 1, 2, 3, 4, 5 and 16.

GARRETT NOT AT RAID 'REUNION'

The old liquor squad that Oliver B. Garrett led had a reunion today at police headquarters in the corridor outside the office of Deputy Superintendent James A. McDevitt.

Nine of them were there, some in uniform and some in civilian clothes, rounded up from the various divisions to which they were assigned when the squad was broken up—John Tobin, Herb Holden, John Laidlaw, John Cloran Daniel Welby, Joseph Clark, Peter Fortin, Henry LaCroix and Thomas Daley.

"What's it all about?" they were asked.

But none knew until they went before McDevitt and were questioned about their knowledge of conditions at 358-358A Tremont st. This is the place where police raids have so aroused the ire of David J. Breen and James Harmon, the owners that they have asked an injunction against the police.

"We're coming back again tomorrow," said one as the men left headquarters.

"What's the idea of coming back again?" asked some one, which brought the reply:

"Oh, Garrett's going to be here."

CHAPTER 32

She begins to laugh again—I take her by the shoulders—

"Someone will hear you, Trix—"

She calms herself in a few minutes, weeping again, pleading—my little sister whom I have never seen weeping in my life—my laughing little sister.

"Cis, get it for me, get it for me—all my life I'll be grateful, get it for me—"

What shall I do? What am I to do? Three or four pounds in the bank at the most—yesterday I spent eight guineas on a new coat to see Roy off to France—last night, was it only last night Roy went back—silk stockings another guinea—yes, no more than three or four pounds in the bank at the most.

"Cis, get it for me—get it for me—"

Aunt Helen cutting me out of her will for refusing to go back to France, father stopping my allowance—Trix down on her knees to me, oh, no—no.

"Get up, Trix, I can't hear it, darling, get up. When must you have it by?"

Needed Today
Smithy Promises

"Today if you can, the sooner the better—I've only got seven days' leave—I don't know how long—she won't do anything till she gets the money—she won't take a check in case—oh, Cis, get it for me, save me—"

"I'll get it, darling; don't cry any more, I'll get it somehow."

We cling together for a moment, desperately, as two terrified passengers on a sinking ship might cling—then part. She throws herself face downward on the red velvet couch. Poor little sister. Poor little sister I would willingly die for.

"Oh, Cis, get it for me, save me—"

I close the door quietly.

Aunt Helen.

Out of the chaos of my mind the name disentangles itself.

Aunt Helen—

It is curious that I can sit in The Corner House and sip coffee quite calmly on this summer morning when my world is toppling about my ears. Outside in the streets people are leisurely basking in the sunshine or walking in twos and threes, chatting amiably.

"I'm Happy"
She Is Forced to Say It

Who would imagine that such a short distance away guns are thundering and men are engaged in murder on a mass scale? France is very near to me this morning. All in a brief hour the Channel has changed from a tract of sea wider than the Atlantic to a narrow neck of water. Despair swamps me like a tidal wave—to recede and leave me petrified with a numbing coldness. I shall never be warm again.

Last night I kissed Roy goodbye at Victoria, but to my surprise there was no tragedy in the parting—a sweet sadness, a gentle melancholy at the temporary severing—nothing more. He would write every day—so would I. He was safely at the base. Soon leave would come round again and I should be waiting at home for him.

"I want you to smile me out of England," he said. "Say 'I'm happy'!" It was not difficult to say.

"I'm happy, I'm happy!"—my last words before the train steamed out. "I'm happy, I'm happy!"—a magic formula that cure of peaceful colors. "I'm happy, I'm happy!"—thankful am I to have whispered it from my heart for fatalistically I know now I shall never mean the words again.

The picture my lover painted

GOV. ALLEN IS SO NOTIFIED BY JAHNCKE

Acting Secretary of the Navy Says Dirigible Los Angeles Booked for Visit Here

Acting Secretary of the Navy Ernest L. Jahncke today informed Governor Allen that 11 warships, and, weather permitting, the dirigible Los Angeles, will be ordered to Boston for the national convention of the American Legion here in October.

"Your letter of July 24, addressed to the President of the United States, concerning the provision of an adequate representation of ships for the convention of the American Legion in October, has been referred to my office for reply," the communication to the governor read.

STUDY SCHEDULE

"The navy fully recognizes the debt our country owes to the members of the Legion and desires to make their convention successful. We are eager to give them an opportunity to visit again ships of the type on which many of them served.

"We have, accordingly, made a new study of our autumn schedule of training, and shall be glad to send to Boston four cruisers, six destroyers, and at least one battleship. The Lexington and the Saratoga are both on the Pacific coast and cannot be brought back without prohibitive cost and loss of training time.

HONOR OLD IRONSIDES

"We have asked the Legion for suggestions as to how a suitable function can be held in connection with the partially restored Constitution.

"We will send the Los Angeles if weather and other conditions make its use available for that period.

"This fleet will make a fine show in Boston harbor and is all we can possibly send without unduly breaking up the very serious work of our fleet, a thing the Legion would not wish us to do."

To avoid hitting a little girl, William T. Burke, driver of Engine 32, saw red, cut the sidewalk at Green and Washington sts. today, smashing a hydrant before he could stop the apparatus.

The girl, five or six years old, ran directly into the path of the engine as it reached the narrow intersection under the Green el. Elevated station.

Firemen riding on the engine were shaken but not injured. Water spouting from the hydrant flooded the street until the flow was shut off.

OPENS ATTACK ON DALLINGER

Two years ago, Dallinger defeated Brennan, the vote being, Dallinger, 71,850; Brennan, 5,372.

"The Grundy billion dollar tariff bill, taxing all of the necessaries of life, forcing you to pay tribute to these barons of industry on everything you use from the cradle to the grave, will place on already overloaded shoulders an intolerable burden," Brennan declared. "Your present congressman voted for every increased schedule and tax and against you."

Governor Praises YD In Devens Review

Camp Devens, July 18—Governor Allen late yesterday reviewed an absolutely faultless demonstration, unmarred by a trace of mishap, when the 26th Division passed in review. More than 25,000 visitors witnessed the parade.

[illegible] was seated at the reviewing stand.

Following the showing of the troops and publicly commended Gen. Feete and his staff on his arrival, the commander-in-chief made the most thorough inspection to which any governor has subjected national guardsmen.

Instead of making a perfunctory inspection of the guard of honor, he looked over equipment, examined rifles for dust or dirt, and asked pertinent questions of the men in the ranks.

With Governor Allen as the guest of honor was Herbert Parker, former attorney-general and chairman of the Massachusetts tercentenary commission.

The Governor watched a spectacular exhibition of a simulated night attack by the 101st Engineers, commanded by Col. Frank Gibbs, aided by a battalion of the 102d Field Artillery and a machine gun company.

A pyrotechnic display gave a touch of realism to the attack as guns boomed and machine guns rattled in the darkness.

Those who discussed the significance of the tercentenary observance, Parker then presented Governor Allen, who said that he knew of no occasion more appropriate to the founding of Massachusetts.

ADDRESSES MEN

"In addressing you," the governor said, "I speak to the successors of the men who participated in the French and Indian Wars, the War of the Revolution, the great Civil War, the War with Spain, and the great World War. The traditions which they have handed down to us are great and glorious.

"They must ever remind us of the valor and heroism which inspired the liberties and rights which the founders came here to enjoy; and on the occasion of this tercentenary celebration, I bespeak from you the same loyalty, the same vigor and the same sacrifice which they, by their example, brought forth from their contemporaries and the evidences of which stand conspicuous in the great achievement of the Massachusetts of which we are a part today."

Additional honors were conferred tonight on the baby son of Governor and Mrs. Allen, when he was officially made a first sergeant in the Massachusetts National Guard.

GASOLINE FIRE HALTS TRAFFIC

Ignited by an acetylene torch, a 75-foot "fuse" of gasoline flared at 8:30 this morning, setting fire to a truck filling the district with smoke and attracting a crowd that bloc[illegible] traffic.

The gasoline had leaked from a truck parked at the corner by John J. Callaghan of Blaine ave., Allston, and ran south in the groove of car rails being torn up in Washington st.

When it reached Lee M. Tran of Wright ave., Medford, who was cutting with the torch, it ignited and the flame raced back in a truck of the Albany Carpet Cleaning Co.

Pedestrians threw and kicked dirt on the flaming gas. Thomas Hannon of Dimmick st., Somerville, and Louis Nocera of Bow st., Everett, helped Callaghan put out the truck fire with an extinguisher from a nearby theater. Traffic Officers Owen O'Rourke and Charles Donovan also aided.

7 ARRESTED IN RACE SWINDLE

Louis Jesselsohn, of 72 Strathmore rd., Allston, retired tobacco merchant was in New York today in an attempt to identify seven men as operators of a "racehorse swindle" by which he was victimized of $48,000 last May 31.

The men arrested are James Forsyth, 38, out on $35,000 bail on a grand larceny charge in Boston, Edward Canter, 49, New York, said to be an international confidence man; Edward Steel, 40, Hillside, Pa.; Harry Gordon, 46; Jacques Mohr, 34 and Louis Foster, 28, all of New York, and Harry Raymond, 79, who gave no address.

Jesselsohn was in Atlantic City in May when he met a group of men, one posing as a hotel owner, who told him the old story of having advance information on horse races.

Jesselsohn sold $48,000 worth of securities and turned the money over to the men in a New York hotel where he heard them place bets by telephone. Soon he was informed his horse had lost, and the men departed.

ASKS COUNCIL FOR GARRETT REWARD

District Attorney Foley Believes It Will Hasten Capture of Missing Raider

District Attorney William J. Foley today asked the City Council to offer a reward for the capture of Oliver B. Garrett, pensioned rum raider and fugitive from justice for 26 days.

In a letter to William G. Lynch, president of the council, Foley said all efforts of police and the district attorney's office, with the newspapers co-operating, had failed.

President Lynch is expected to submit the district attorney's letter to the council for action Monday.

Besides sparing this surprise, Dist. Atty. Foley today revealed the scope of the hunt being conducted by private detectives, independent of the police, although working in conjunction with the police wherever possible.

Three national detective agencies are now employed and they have operatives working along the Canadian border in four states, New York, Vermont, New Hampshire and Maine.

POSTING CIRCULARS

Among other things they are having the district attorney's Garrett circulars, with his picture and description, posted at immigration stations and at gas stations and hotels where the owners will permit it.

These detectives are working in small groups and are enlisting the aid of city and town authorities everywhere they go.

Tourist homes and overnight camps are not being overlooked in this exhaustive search. Eight detectives were reported in St. Albans, Vt., today conducting a hunt.

From Police Chief Russell of Burlington, Vt., Hub police received word today that he had been sent an anonymous letter saying that Garrett had been staying there but was leaving for Montreal. Investigation failed to substantiate this clue, Chief Russell said.

Boston police disclosed today that Inspector Thomas Mulrey has been especially assigned to seek a bus driver on a Boston to Portland line in the hope that he may hold the key to the whereabouts of Garrett.

While much is hoped for from Mulrey's search, officials said there would be no letup in the hunt being conducted daily by Special Officers William Condon and Peter Dilessa.

TWICE REPORTED

Two weeks ago a bus driver, who did not give his name, reported seeing Garrett in a beauty parlor in Portsmouth, N. H. Last Monday he made another report by telephone saying he had seen Garrett again in the same place.

Condon and Di Sessa are running down clues furnished by telephone and letter daily. These "tips," averaging two or three a day now, a drop since the first two weeks of the Garrett hunt, when dozens of tips were received every day.

NEAR HUB SAYS KIN

Garrett is hiding not far from Boston and is not afraid of capture, according to a relative, who while professing ignorance of his exact whereabouts, claimed complete knowledge of the situation surrounding the former policeman's disappearance.

"If Ollie is released to prison there will be plenty of others who'll go along with him," this relative said. "They know it and they are going to keep him well hidden, and comfortable, if they can."

Whereupon Fred shook on it and went up the tree. It may be cheap at that to his mother, to know where he is for $2.40, which the five-day stunt is likely to cost her.

Fred's sister, Pauline, 8, promised him she would hoist food up the tree when his hunger dictated. It looks like a busy week-end for her, she'll have to run all the errands, too.

A drastic recommendation for legislation compelling the installation of sprinklers in all buildings of more than three stories, will feature a concerted campaign against arson gangs, according to Mayor Curley today.

The mayor's announcement followed a conference at City Hall with police and fire department heads and representatives of civic organizations.

Mayor Curley said he would ask for legislation compelling the installation of sprinklers and other fire prevention devices in all such buildings, whether business or residential.

In return for this legislation the mayor said he would demand that fire insurance companies doing business in Boston reduce rates from 50 to 75 per cent because the installation of sprinklers would mean 90 per cent safety.

WAR ON ARSON GANGS

He said he will also demand that the insurance companies join with the city in the active campaign against the arson gangs, in which police and fire departments will cooperate.

The mayor said that some years ago the insurance companies failed to keep their promise to reduce rates when the fire department was motorized and a fall water high pressure system was installed.

He will ask the fire insurance companies under what conditions rates will give reductions in rate and will demand they give reduced rates to those compelled to install sprinklers if the legislation goes through.

SENT 26 TO PRISON

Mayor Curley said he also is in favor of installing sprinklers in elevator shafts of buildings more than three stories high.

He pointed out that fires starting in basements frequently work up elevator shafts, and some times cause loss of life on upper floors.

The mayor recalled that some years ago he conducted a campaign against arson gangs resulting in the indictment of 152 persons, with no going to prison, the terms of those to 7 years each. These indictments, he said, automatically reduced fire losses in Boston 500,000.

ASK GATE IN PARK FENCE

Park Commissioner William P. Long is considering the request of City Councilor Clement A. Norton, of Hyde Park, that an opening be cut in the municipal fence around the park in Wolcott sq., Readville.

Strangely enough there is no way to reach the benches in the park without jumping over the fence.

Although the condition is not valid for seat, the present complaint to the fact never reached according to Commissioner Long.

A new and practical use for bridge prizes, cash, card keens and the like was discovered early today by Mrs. Lena Jackson, 28, of Hewes st., Atlantic, who routed a would-be hugger with a bridge lamp prize at the Quincy pageant.

Carrying her prize Mrs. Jackson was about to enter her home when a man who had followed her from Furlong st. rushed toward her with open arms. She lifted the lamp in a threatening manner and screamed. Her would be assailant fled. Mrs. Jackson's husband, Clarence E. Jackson, ran and cut off the man.

Woman Risks Life to Halt Wild Auto

When Mrs. George E. Maher, of Hyde st., Malden, saw a driverless auto careening down Hyde st. toward Webster playground today she put the safety of the children in the playground above her own and her baby's safety. Knowing that the lives of many would be in danger if the car struck Maher dropped her baby and ran into the street to stop the car. As the boys and girls were swinging on the gates the driverless car crashed into the gates and stopped the car. She has wrenched her shoulder. When the unidentified owner approached he drove away without a word of thanks.

New England Corn Makes Its Appearance at $1 a Dozen

Highest quality fresh fruits and vegetables of every variety fill the Boston market, and corn—luscious ears from New England gardens, greatly superior to that which has been coming from the South—has made its appearance, even if for the present it does command a price of $1 a dozen.

Twenty-four structural workers employed at the navy yard were notified today that they will be laid off temporarily. Officials announced there are 670 men employed at the yard, though an effort has been made to keep the number at 1500.

It was explained that when the cruiser Concord came to the yard it was hoped as a rush job with the result that a number of men on enforced furlough were called back. These were later laid off again a few at a time but it was possible to keep the 24 on the job to the finish. In this number are shipwrights, welders, sheet metal workers and others all coming under the general classification of structural workers.

JUNE WALKER GIVEN ONE OF LEADING ROLES IN 'WAR NURSE' MOVIE

ANITA PAGE ALSO IN CAST

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor for Universal Service

(Copyright, 1930, by Universal Service)

LOS ANGELES, July 18 — Hollywood is watching with interest the career of pretty June Walker who was brought here to play one of the leading roles in "War Nurse" by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

For the last five years or even longer June Walker has been Broadway's favorite ingenue. She was fortunate in being given good parts perhaps the most outstanding being "Loreli," the dumb heroine in Anita Loos' play, "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes." M G M is spreading itself in the matter of cast for "War Nurse." A Cosmopolitan serial, with a new war angle. Anita Page plays another important role and so does Robert Montgomery. Robert Ames is also a member of the cast.

Being modest by nature we hate to say "I suggested it." But if you read this column perhaps you will remember that it was this writer who asked Carl Laemmle, Jr., why not Mary Duncan for the part in "The Command to Love" that Mary Nash created on the stage. They are very much alike in appearance and in personality. The papers were signed Tuesday, and that means the play will go into production as soon as the leading man is definitely chosen. By the bye, I hear on all sides that the Hays office asked that the title Command to Love be changed. Universal changed it to guess what—"The Bonded Diplomat."

A HAPPENING that may interest our readers is the reception given Amos n Andy at the Beverly Hills Hotel. Good thing it wasn't made public that those two persons would be at the hotel else the place might have been stormed by fans. The idea of their popularity on the radio can be gained by the presence of radios in several theatres along the pier at Venice and Santa Monica where patrons are told they can listen to Amos n Andy while waiting for the feature to start. And believe it or not half of the folk on the pier turn into the theatres after they have listened before they see the movie program.

OTIS SKINNER finishes his final today. The grand old man of the stage who has been with us here for several months has made himself very popular at Fine Arts circles and there will be much good will to be said before he departs for New York the last of the week. Mrs. Skinner has already left for the East. Montagu Love, who was probably the best actor to be signed for Skinner's play the part of the janitor. We haven't seen Monty for a long time and it is too bad, for he is certainly one of the best actors on the screen. With his stage record he ought to be right in the front row for character roles.

SNAPSHOTS OF Hollywood collected at random. Heat notwithstanding Ann Pennington and Joe Frisco visiting Abe Olsen's to listen to the Russian orchestra. Sally Blane, Polly Ann Young and Loretta Young here sisters also at the Olsen Night Club Lupe Velez and Gary Cooper dancing together and getting the report that they are not as well with them as they were a short while ago. Lennie Hale and Sidney Blackmer and Harry Green purchasing soda water at a corner drugstore. Ben Lyon, Bebe Daniels and other film folk in the same place at the same time, all of them stopping on their way home from the fights. Glimpsed at the Cocoanut Grove were Virginia Sherid, Marshall Neilan, Adolphe Menjou and Marie Edwards getting a breath of summer. The well captured by Ralph Forbes on a hunting expedition being exhibited to admiring friends. That's all today. See you tomorrow!

Just a Little Love Interest

JOAN PEERS AND NEIL HAMILTON

WILLIAM POWELL IN ANOTHER TRIUMPH ON MET. SCREEN

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

WILLIAM POWELL'S fan mail must be getting heavier every day. He deserves all the popularity he has, and even more. One begins to think that in his lexicon of youth there was no such word as fail. He is an ace among leading men. As master detective or hunted crook, as the stage producer in "Pointed Heels," the gambler in that sterling talkie, "Street of Chance," he was well nigh perfect in his role. He now appears with equal excellence of characterization, as a criminal defense lawyer.

* * *

William Powell

Mr. Powell to defend him. There's a telltale ring which pops into the story; it proves to the lawyer that the girl does have been on a jaunt with the intoxicated suitor. So the lawyer, wishing to protect her and at the same time win his case, instigates the bribers of a juror. This puts Mr. Powell in the clutches of a sleuth (Thomas A. Jackson) who had been hot on his trail. His sweetheart is at the prison gates to tell him she will be waiting for him when his sentence is ended.

THIS GIVES A NUTSHELL outline of the plot, but it gives no hint of the marvelous direction of "For the Defense." Director Lewis Seiler has swept from scene to scene. In masterful manner Director John Cromwell established his color. Both after flash which attune the audience to what is to come. First, we see New York's Bridge of Sighs; then the prisoner being matched to the courtroom as the voice of a megaphone man talks to sightseers in a "rubberneck" bus in the streets below. It is all swiftly and cleverly achieved, that atmosphere. Speedily, also, Mr. Cromwell swings into the story. Thanks he, he pulls lights and shadows above dialogue, so that the imagination is kept alert and the mind tense. This is really good talkie direction.

Mr. Powell adds one more to his almost perfect portrayals of sound character. His stage training lends depth to his work, and in his nine years in pictures he has absorbed all the film technique there is. So he adds to the long list of his triumphs.

ALPERT GETS OVATION AT WILBUR

By HARRIS MORGAN

When the dynamic Alexander Leftwich took the curtain call for "author" after the premiere

other night of "Tattle Tales," at the Wilbur, he hit the right note when he stated that he had tried to make "Talent and youth and beauty" the highlights of his revue. He has done just that. And in the list of his youthful folk of talent appears Mickey Alpert, who made his stage bow in Mr. Leftwich's production. As a result, Mr. Alpert is today apparently at the set for a fine, fortnight career. For reports broadcast of his merit has brought many offers of jobs. Also Mr. Alpert is being nightly given an ovation at the theater. Further, his ability is proving the big push behind several songs, one of which is "Counting the Sheep," the lines of which refer to the sleeplessness of a fellow who has fallen deeply in love.

"I PLAN TO stick with Mr. Leftwich," Mr. Alpert informed us. "The reception given my appearance has of course pleased me more than words can tell, and I want to thank everybody who had a hand in giving a hand to me. I find I like the stage, and I certainly hope to make it a career. I was nervous that first night, but it has all worn off now, and I am mighty glad of that."

* * *

MICKEY ALPERT lives in Roxbury. He graduated from English high in 1923, his ambition was to be an actor. Necessity forced him to begin in a workaday business, but he kept the fires burning in his soul. When the Cocoanut Grove was opened, luck came his way. The outcome of his serious attention to duty is that he made good as a singer and as master of ceremonies, so that today he is widely known. In "Tattle Tales" he not only sings, but he has to do some acting, also.

Mr. Alpert has a host of friends who wish him the best of good luck.

HOBBLE SKIRT ON STAGE

Things go by opposites on the stage. Carolyn Clarke, who plays the slangy sister in "The Long Road" at the Plymouth, is not by any means slangy offstage. Miss Clarke is quiet, demure and practical away from the theater; she would never think of using the pert talk she speaks behind the footlights when among her friends.

Miss Clarke was born in the quiet little town of Adams, N. Y., but spent much of her youth in the Middle West. She graduated from the Benedictine Scholastica's Academy in Chicago and went on the stage in 1926, in Harry H. Frazee's production of

STAR BUTT OF SONG JOKE IN FILM

Jack Holt, who appears in a leading role in "Hell's Island," Columbia production at the New B. F. Keith's tomorrow, has recently passed the three-score-and-ten mark and feels that he is just starting all over again. The movie favorite has not undergone any mysterious rejuvenation process, for in this instance the limit mark of 70 refers not to years but to pictures in which Mr. Holt has been featured.

And now, after a varied career Jack bids fair to achieve added laurels as a singer, being the possessor of an unusually colorful baritone voice of great range and power.

Up to the present time, however, he has not had an opportunity to show his voice prowess via the talking or rather singing screen, although for a few days he was under the impression that his current role in "Hell's Island" called for some songs. This was due to a practical joke perpetrated by Ralph Graves, who appears with Holt in the picture.

Ralph concocted a scheme with Jo Swerling, the continuity and dialogue writer, to add a few songs to Jack's copy of the manuscript—in French.

They also got Director Edward Sloman in on the joke. They had Jack singing industriously at rehearsals, with careful coaching as to the proper French pronunciation. It was not until the picture was completely finished that Jack Holt realized that something had been put over on him by his good friend Graves.

"Betsy Nobody." Afterwards she played in "The Noose" in New York and had a part in the long run of "The Play's the Thing" with Holbrook Blynn. Last season she was in the Shubert production of "Autumn Violins."

In "The Long Road" Miss Clarke wears among other costumes the only hobble skirt now to be seen by the modern public. When she makes her appearance in the new weird costumes of 1918 every woman in the audience lets out a gasp of astonishment. But the costumes are an absolute copy of gowns and dresses worn in those days of war.

Swampscott Dinner for Diplomats

Minister of Albania Host to Tercentenary Guests at New Ocean House

AN INTERESTING GATHERING of diplomats from Washington in the city for the State Tercentenary celebration were guests of His Excellency F. Konitza, minister of Albania, at the New Ocean House, Swampscott, this week. Minister Konitza is spending the season at the North Shore hotel and is host to many Washington diplomats each season. Thursday evening he gave a dinner honoring the ambassador from Turkey, Moukhtar Bey, and his daughter, Miss Fahire Hanum, and Mr. and Mrs. C. Rossiter Farnum. Mr. Farnum was assistant attorney-general under the Coolidge administration.

DR. AND MRS. FREDERICK J. COTTON, whose daughter Miss Jean Cotton, was married this season to Mr. Romilly F. Humphries, Jr., with Miss Janet B. Wilhall, are among the recent arrivals at the New Ocean House. Their summer estate is San Rocco, Waterbury, Maryland, and Mrs. Cotton has been spending most of the season there, coming on to Swampscott directly from there.

MR. LYNFORD BIDDLE OF Lansdale, Chestnut Hill, Pa., is spending the summer at Swampscott as is his usual custom. The run over to Philadelphia by motor is only the matter of a day when Mr. Biddle elects to attend a function in his home city. Recently he made the trip and back within 48 hours.

MRS. FREDERICK CLARK SAYLES of Aldwell, Irvington-on-Hudson, joined her mother, Mrs. Barton E. Kingman of New York, at the New Ocean House this week. Mrs. Kingman spends each summer on the shore and her grandchildren, Helen Kingman Law and Barton E. Kingman Law, juniors in the Walter W. Law family, and Caroline A. Sayles, Mary G. and Frederick C. Jr., and Barton Kingman Sayles, motor from Irvington to spend weekends with her.

Now at Her Marion Home

MRS. JEROME FORBES PERKINS of Owl's Nest Farm, Framingham, is with her attractive family at Marion for the summer.

Grafton Smiths Are Hosts at Dinner in Their New Home

MR. AND MRS. GRAFTON SMITH (Janice Vaughan) of Hamilton gave a delightful dinner party in their home Tuesday evening in honor of their house guest, Miss Harriet Cox of New York. Miss Cox was a classmate of Mrs. Smith's at Miss Walker's School. Antiquity has been preserved in restoring the old house, which the Smiths have renovated with white shingles, with blue blinds. The original beamed ceilings have been left showing and the house is furnished in Colonial antique fixture. Among the guests were Mr. Ransom Hodges, Miss Betty Barrell, Mr. William King, Mr. Paul Bates, Miss Frances Goodwin and Mr. Allen Whitney. After the dinner, Mr. and Mrs. Smith took their guests to Del Monte's to dance.

MISS JEAN SEARS, DAUGHTER of Dr. and Mrs. Henry F. Sears of Boston and Beverly, is spending a few weeks with her parents at their summer home before leaving for Europe. Mrs. Henry Cabot Lodge (Emily Sears) will arrive at Beverly Cove in about a week to spend the remainder of the summer with her parents.

Byrd's Flight Over Pole to Be Shown at Rainbow Fete

THROUGH THE COURTESY of the Arkino Guild Inc., the famous talking moving picture of Admiral Richard E. Byrd's flight over the South Pole will be shown on Saturday evening at 8.30 in the bungalow on the estate of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Coolidge at Manchester for the benefit of the Boston Children's Friend Society. This will bring to a close the Rainbow Fete which opens at two o'clock on Riverman Farm, the Coolidge estate, and which will continue through the afternoon and evening, but now originally planned to have a short movie which could be shown several times during the afternoon and evening, but now this part of the program has been changed and only the thrilling Byrd picture will be shown in the evening. The picture shows the departure of Byrd and his party, their playground the South Pole, the actual flight over the Pole and their return to Panama

When Babies CRY

Babies will cry, often for no apparent reason. You may not know what's wrong, but you can always give Castoria. This soon has your little one comforted; if not, you should call a doctor. Don't experiment with medicines intended for the stronger system of adults! Most of those little upsets are soon soothed away by a little of this pleasant-tasting, gentle-acting children's remedy that children like.

It may be the stomach, or may be the little bowels. Or in the case of older children, a sluggish, constipated condition. Castoria is still the thing to give. It is almost certain to clear up any minor ailment, and could by no possibility do the youngest child the slightest harm. So it's the first thing to think of when a child has a coated tongue; won't play, can't sleep, is fretful or out of sorts. Get the genuine; it always has Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the package.

STEPDAUGHTERS OF WAR

for me on the palette of his fancy will be nothing but a dream picture of peaceful colours. "I'm happy, I'm happy"—I should have known. There is no lasting happiness for this sick, sad generation of mine. Happiness past for the old ones, happiness to come for the young ones—but nothing for the race apart from whom youth has been snatched before it learned to play at youth. How sad is the sadness of a sunny summer morning when hope has died.

Aunt Helen is at The War Workers' Canteen. Sanders the maid tell me. She waits there at table every lunch time. Sanders is openly disapproving. One gathers that in her opinion a lady of Aunt Helen's position is lower only by herself many degrees socially by feeding government clerks.

However she writes down the address and offers me a glass of sherry and the gratuitous information that I'm looking like death and ought to be lying down instead of gallivanting over town in this heat. Miss Nellie.

The canteen is in the basement of a large hotel. I am obliged to talk on the end of an enormous queue of men and women off all ages who are impatiently waiting for the doors to open. They are all grumbling—"Do they think we've got all day? The doors ought to be open for us not us waiting for them to open."

Eventually the doors do open and the queue surges rapidly along. "Pass, please, pass, pass."

The lady at the turnstile is extremely suspicious of me. "Where is my pass? I haven't any? I feel criminally guilty. Miss Helen Smith a niece? Oh, perhaps I'd better wait—this in a voice indicating that any attempt to steal the canteen cutlery will be made only over her dead body.

The huge underground room is filled with long trestle tables each laid with places for forty or fifty people. The tables are covered with clean blue and white check cloths and there are vases of flowers everywhere. A slight difference to the ambulance convoy. A day or two in France would soon cure the war workers of their grouse.

"Perhaps you'd better sit somewhere," suggests the lady at the turnstile. "You look white and you're rather in my way. I've sent word to your aunt."

Had the speaker been referring to royalty she would probably not have been half so reverent. She is a musical comedy attired young woman with waves of golden hair ex-apping from her khaki cap with careful carelessness.

I apologize and wearily propose myself the pleasure. A pretty young woman comments audibly on the cheek of some of these blasted slackers. All at once I am embraced ecstatically.

"Smithy, darling, You've come to see me at last."

It is the R. F.

"Let me introduce you, Smithy, to all the Despatch Riders."

The R. F. is a born showman. She proceeds to tell my life history, or what she knows of it, to the assembled Despatch Riders. Smithy was in the canoe and when I was drowned. Then she was killed. The musical comedy young woman appeal considerably discomforted. The other drivers murmur semi-audible "Realtys" and The R. F. invites me warmly to luncheon and is so disappointed when I explain about aunt.

Oh dear, yes she did so want to chat about the dear old canon, so happy—none of these dear girls have ever been to France of course—all very loudly for the benefit of the dear girls who have never been to France the said dear girls looking as fed up as The B. F. means them to. Whatever have I been doing to my dear self all white and drawn, quite old in the face, and of course I'm only twenty, everyone knows—a—catching sight of my engagement ring a romance? But how thrilling—why are you back, no end, dear, dead and numb they feel.

Fortunately I spot Aunt Helen staggering under a heavy tray of food and make my escape. The R. F. does not amuse me today. My sense of humor has departed I recall myself and watch Aunt Helen dispassionately. It takes exactly one minute to discover that as a waitress she is the world's hall-marked washout. The war workers, having deduced from my welcome that I could not possibly know Aunt very intimately, make no effort to conceal their disgust.

"Silly old blighter"—"Doddering old mosser"—"One-foot-in-the-grave-Gertie"—"Mercys."—I should like Aunt to hear a few of the flattering descriptions.

Clubwomen to Assist in Solving Prison Problem

By NANCY BREWSTER

The prison problem must be seized and the clubwomen of the country are to have a hand in the solution. If there is ever to be a remedying of the situation prison conditions must change.

Riot and bloodshed, burning buildings, gunshots and deaths have sounded the warning that the prison situation must be solved. Miss Jane B. Jaffrey, chairman of the Department of Correction in the General Federation of Women's Clubs, is making a call upon the two and a half million clubwomen of the organization for solution that the modernization of the underworld "can" can operate evolution quite be challenged.

If society would protect itself the causes that make for the ills must be dealt right quickly.

Massachusetts clubwomen, in fact all the clubwomen of the nation, will be looked upon by Miss Jaffrey to endorse a comprehensive program tending to bring about a more equitable understanding of prison conditions when they resume activities in September. The clubwomen will be urged to pay personal visits to penal institutions study conditions, and survey the situation generally.

CITES CAUSES OF RIOTS

Three causes have been cited in the prison riots, Miss Jaffrey claims.

She states:

"First: Overcrowding—almost twice as many prisoners as can be housed decently; sometimes three men in one cell little larger than a coffin. Unsanitary conditions, lack of sunshine, human misery so great that death loses its horror. Shame on our Christianity that prisoners, themselves of their own initiative are tearing down worn-out old buildings, which they should have been ordered to destroy long years ago.

Second: The herding together in our prisons of all sorts and conditions of human beings without regard to their mental and physical condition or to the treatment or training which they need to fit them for return to the outside community.

Third: Idleness or exploitation—in some prisons, men and women are still driven at their work to make money for private business men; in others, the better work system is developing slowly, hampered in most instances by inadequate appropriations, incompetent management, old worn out buildings and political chicanery.

To add to the seriousness of the situation, 80 per cent of the men and women come out of prison. Each year almost half a million human beings pass in and out of those monstrous buildings and return to the community, worse for their experience, determined to wreak their vengeance on society.

WILL MEET CHALLENGE

"There is a happier side to this dread picture. A sane and Christian prison movement is shaping, given impetus by riots and scandal and by the passage of the Hawes-Cooper bill, for which the General Federation took so noble a stand and which has brought prison officials together to work out something better."

Thus no new task to American clubwomen. The task merely to [illegible] greater one. Miss Jaffrey [illegible] should courage and [illegible] leadership on the part of the two and a half million clubwomen back [illegible] unprecedented progress [illegible] the needs of the individual prisoner. The prison problem is the [illegible] task before clubwomen today, she concludes, assuring that he [illegible] of the General Federation of Women's Clubs will meet the challenge.

Conservation Item on Fall Schedule of State Federation

As Mrs. Daniel M. Goodridge retired chairman of the department of conservation in the Massachusetts State Federation, has always maintained "There is no more important work than the educating of the new generation to the value of the preservation of what remains and recreation for the future.

In this she is heartily agreed with by Mrs. Katherine F. Pettis, general federation conservation chairman who states further:

"For long have we consumed our natural wealth with little thought for its renewal. Clubwomen must support a conservation program which will stress constructive progression in educating the public to know the value of our natural resources."

In the fall, Mrs. Tippetts will encourage her State clubwomen with the hope that resolutions be passed at their State conventions making more present national park standards as set forth by the Department of the Interior.

Lever Employes on Outing Tomorrow

More than 3000 are expected to attend the annual outing of employes of Lever Brothers Company and their families and friends tomorrow at Norumbega Park, Auburndale.

From Riverside station they will parade to the park, led by Stiles Military Band. There will be [illegible] ecstatic golf match. Prizes have been donated by President F. A. Countway. There will also be athletic competition, baby parades, novelty contests, dancing and a ball game.

Cotton Conquers the Tailored Suit

By ANN ARDEN

Model from R. H. White & Co.

(ANN ARDEN broadcasts latest style news over WBZH every Tuesday and Thursday at 11 a. m.)

THE STAND-OFFISH tailored suit has at last succumbed. It has accepted cotton on the same terms as it was accepted by other morning, afternoon and evening fashions for the summer—on the grounds of smartness, coolness and convenience. And the new tailleur, consequently, is a fashion not too [illegible] tailored but youthful, and a practical thing to wear.

THE JAUNTY little model you choose for shopping, tennis or business may be made of piqué, gingham cotton tweed or dotted swiss. You may wear it until it's threadbare, if it suits, hang it in the attic and give it a pass for another suit out where you'll be meeting people who expect you to be chic no matter where the meeting occurs.

THE COTTON tailleur is the counterpart of the smart silk or wool suit purchased last spring. The same nipping and tucking characterizes it, its blouse or sweater is much the same.

TAILORED and choice for travel and every day use is the black and white cotton sharkskin suit pictured, boasting inverted pleats each side front of skirt. The coat fitted to the waistline at back with nipped-in tucks, and fastened at front with link buttons of white pique, well-turned collar, notched revers, and patch pockets, with over-flap, are added details. The blouse of white cotton pique is sleeveless, and fastens down center front with pearl buttons. The black velvet beret, with a brim, softly adjustable, and forming a becoming halo about the face is very new.

IN YOUR enthusiasm for the lighter touch upon fashion, you must not overlook the fact that dark accessories are still very much in the picture. The black silk bag carried with the cool-white kid gloves and shoes of black reptile and suede complete a very smart black and white ensemble.

THIS BUSINESS of heels is getting almost as serious as the old boudoir cap used to be. They are tremendously chic when hewing to the tailored lines that suit them.

THERE'S just a touch of reptile in the news about the coming season. If we are to believe reports we hear of new shoe styles. Bits of reptile are appliqued on oxfords of kid or suede in a most ornamental fashion. Some shoes combine black lizard with the decorative ring lizard to get a smart effect. Built-up heels of leather promise to continue popular.

ANN ARDEN will answer questions concerning clothes, social customs or fashions generally. Address your questions to the Boston Evening American, or the Boston Sunday Advertiser, or to Station WBZH.

Stirs London Society

London, July 18 (US)—London society is agog with the latest gossip of how Mrs. James Corrigan for many years the most free-handed spender of American hostess es in London, "stubbed her toes" a week ago.

It was on the night of Thursday, July 10, at the midnight revue given for the Prince of Wales fund for the British Legion.

Gossip has it that Mrs. Cunningham-Reid, sister of Lady Mount batten, brought two guests to Mrs Corrigan's pre-theater party, both of whom Mrs. Corrigan refused to recognize.

It is said that Mrs. Cunningham Reid's friends were both prominent members of Parliament as well as well regarded society. Evenbody has been waiting to see what punishment may be visited upon Mrs. Corrigan by the highest social arbiters.

The blow fell today, when Prince George cancelled his acceptance to Mrs Corrigan's dinner party in evening.

CHAPTER 11

Raquel followed Greta to an elevator that reminded her of an ornate bird cage. Greta pressed a button. The cage mounted slowly, magically. By the same magic it stopped.

They disembarked into a small room, barren of furnishings except for a desk under a window. Yes, and a carpet. A carpet like brown leaves that have hidden away under the snow until springtime.

The man sitting behind the desk had only one arm. There were many medals and bright, colored ribbons on his chest, like the one who ran the elevator in the Continental. He pressed a button on the desk. A bell rang musically somewhere beyond.

Another moment and a double door at the back of the small room parted noiselessly to admit a young woman in a tight black dress with starched collar and cuffs of glossy whiteness.

She seemed to glide forward without effort. Her eyes had engulfed Greta and Raquel at a glance.

"Good morning," she said, tonelessly. "Won't you come in?" She turned toward the open doors.

Girls Awed
At Alphonse's Room

"Whadda you think!" Greta whispered. "She got us just like that. Did you see her turn the old welcome mat over on us?"

Inside one walked over more woven leaves. Ankle-deep they seemed. There was only an occasional piece of furniture along the broad high hall and yet it seemed filled. The walls gave that effect. They were the color of everything lovely under the sun, and yet they were no color.

The way led into a room twice as large as the room Raquel had found so overpowering at the house of the Bosarts in New York. Here the carpet like brown leaves took on a deeper tone. The walls were even more alive. Long, low benches, with carved legs and deep cushions of velvet, brown green like moss, were placed here and there with deliberate carelessness. A single leaf of roses, their petals blood red on the inner side, waxy orange on the outer side, stood on a carved table under a life-sized portrait of a gorgeous woman in a violet [illegible] gown.

No flesh and blood woman in this [illegible] From the top of her powdery coiffure to her tiny [illegible]

"Let's sit down," said Greta, herself quelled by the atmosphere of something she could not define. "And take a load off our feet," she added, defiantly.

"Bon jour, Mademoiselles," Alphonse greeted them gaily, smilingly, advancing toward the bench on which they sat. Raquel had not seen him enter the room. "You slept late. That is good. There is a busy day before us. We must meet it with freshness, with vivacity."

"I'm all set. Let's go," said Greta.

"And Mademoiselle?" Alphonse beamed on Raquel. There was not a hint of what had happened the night before in a beautiful garden, despoiled, for a while, by his spleen.

"I too am anxious to begin," she said, giving him her smile.

In Good Hands
Georgette Arrives

"Then I will put you in the hands of Georgette. She will show you to your dressing-rooms, and see that you are comfortable. Such things as you are to show will be brought to you. Come."

In the hall they were met by a jolly little round dumpling of a woman in the uniform of a black dress with white cuffs and collar they had seen outside.

"But I do know beeem," protested Georgette, pouting. "I know beeem ver' well."

"There. You see?" he said, with a gesture of outspread hands. "This Georgette is an English scholar. She could give lessons to Her Majesty."

Raquel noticed girls, women of various ages, of varied but pronounced coloring, flitting through the hall. A small group of them had gathered at the end of the hall staring unashamed at her and at Greta. They chattered, tossed their heads, shrugged their shoulders.

Annoyed by their chatter, Alphonse turned.

"Allez," he called sharply.

They fluttered and dashed, like a covey of quail, through doors out of sight.

Raquel and Greta learned they were to share one of the large dressing rooms. This room was lined with mirrors. There were two chaise-longues against opposite walls. No other furniture. Not even a chair, or a table.

"The robes are to bring. The eat, she is at twelve. For two hours," chirped Georgette. And left them with a flirt of her black skirt.

"Now I ask you!" Greta flung herself on one of the lounges convulsed with laughter. "Can you tie it? Everything's just as clear as mud. I hope Georgette sticks around. She's a laugh a minute, and laughs look scarcer than a rooster's molars around here."

Raquel said.

Ready to Scratch
Americans Dished

"I'm glad we're to be together."

"You better be," said Greta ominously. "Did you see that flock of Frenchies up at the end of the hall?"

"You mean the ones Monsieur Alphonse sent away?"

"Sent away? Sent out on their little pink ears!"

"Yes, I noticed them. Who were they?"

"The ladies of the anvil chorus, dearie. They were giving us the O. O. And did they like us? Ouch! Just as a sick cat likes sour cream."

"But how do they know whether they like us or not?" asked Raquel wonderingly. "We are strangers to them."

"You betcha my life we are," Greta exclaimed. "Strangers and nothing but. An American model in this burg is just the same as a pain in the neck to those dames. Right now they're sharpening their claws and getting ready to scratch us. But don't worry, dearie. I'm some little pussy myself when it comes to scratching."

"But if we haven't done anything to them—"

"Yes, but we have. We've hit them in their pocketbooks. Than which there is nothing worse to a lady who is working to collect a lump sum so she can nab herself a husband. Did you ever hear of a dowry?"

"Yes—"

"Well, dowries were invented by Frenchmen. Dowry is Chinese for bonus. It means 'Take the woman, and here's your money for your trouble.' No money, no trouble."

"You mean these girls cannot marry unless they have money to give to their husbands?"

"You got the idea, old dear. Pay as you enter or stay outside and take your chances some careless bimbo will come along and invite you to commit matrimony as is."

"But what has our being here to do with that?"

Greta gurgled gleefully.

"We take the places of two French models, and we collect the wages of a couple of dozen of 'em. And do they bleat!"

The Marry-Go-Round
—By HELEN ROWLAND

Women—and Other Women

ODD, HOW tenderly the average divorcee speaks of her ex-husband after she has passed the "brute and fiend" stage.

Spinach may be creamed and jazzed up so that a man won't [illegible] it, but advice has to be sugar-coated and disguised as flattery before he will take it without wincing.

Marriage is a looking-glass in which you will some day see yourself as your husband or wife sees you. For the sake of your soul and your self-esteem choose a flattering one!

Just about the time a man is beginning to understand how to handle [illegible] of a woman, along comes a newer model, and he junks the old one.

In Bulgaria a woman may become a lawyer but never a judge. Which proves that woman's argumentative powers are still respected, but that her judgment and reasoning powers [illegible] always are regarded as a joke.

A wife can count on nine points of the law, which are possession but the office vamp gambles on the tenth, which is propinquity.

A girl is not always a hypocrite when she pretends to believe all the canned compliments, sweet nothings and applesauce a man feeds her. Sometimes she is just an optimist who hopes in her hope that a little drop of the real [illegible] may leak out.

After she has passed the deadline of 25 an ex-flapper can no more afford to be particular about what fate hands her in the way of a husband than the man who jumps a train can afford to quarrel about his location in the Pullman.

What's in Fashion?
Twin Furnishings

Directed by AMOS PARRISH

NEW YORK, July 18—Have you twins in your living room? It's the fashion to have them.

Twin sofas, we mean—or twin mirrors or chairs or tables or lamps. Exactly matching. Or so nearly matching that it's obvious they belong to the same family.

And this idea of twins—or pairs of objects—is found in other fashions besides home furnishings.

Costume accessories, for instance. Twin clips or pins . . . one on the hat, the other on the dress or handbag. Pairs of bracelets. Pairs of rings.

And see how fashion-wise mothers are dressing their small children. Two girls . . . or two boys . . . exactly alike. Or a brother and sister in matching costumes . . . brother in shorts and sister in a skirt.

GROUPED FURNITURE

Fashionable homes are using this idea in many ways. One good way we've had sketched for you. You'll see it often. A sofa with identical tables at each end. And identical lamps on these tables.

It makes a pleasant grouping, don't you think? And it's this fashion for grouping furniture that's had much to do with making pairs of objects a fashion.

No longer does the smart living room arrange its furniture in lines around the walls. It groups pieces for convenient reading . . . or easy conversation.

CHAIRS AND SOFAS

Watch the living rooms you visit. Notice how often you'll see pairs of mirrors. One at each end of a room.

Especially when each has a small table beside it with lamp and ash trays and other things on each table.

And do you realize how all this simplifies decoration? Instead of worrying over whether this looks well with that . . . and those go with these . . . simply say to the salesman: "Two of those, please. And two of these"—and your problem is solved.

Pointers on Etiquette
By MRS. BEECKMAN

In the Absence of an Engagement Ring

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

My mother would like to announce my engagement, which doesn't seem a problem, but it is. I haven't an engagement ring and don't wish one, as I would rather use the money to buy something more useful. Is there any way my mother can announce my engagement when I haven't a ring? I understand it is bad form to announce an engagement when the bride-to-be hasn't a ring. H. S.

You are letting the wrong point of view about this. Since you prefer not to have an engagement ring, that is correct, and is no one's affair but your own. As a matter of fact, I admire very much your independence of spirit in making such a definite decision. Make your engagement announcement as you wish, and erase from your mind the idea that it is necessary to have an engagement ring as the symbol of your engagement. The important thing about being engaged is not the engagement ring, but the spiritual truth in your hearts.

Either Is Proper

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

It would be very much appreciated if you would help settle this question. A. says it is not proper for a young man to have his lady friend come to his parents' home to dinner before they are engaged. B. says it is proper for a young man to have his lady friend meet his people beforehand. BET

As a rule a young man or young lady does not take dinner at the home of the respective families until after the engagement, but it may be done without any serious breach of etiquette. Certainly the young lady may meet the young man's friends before they are engaged, although nowadays no special effort in this direction is considered necessary.

(Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on etiquette submitted by readers.)

—By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

WHAT DOES love mean to you? Love may be the most magic word in the world, but it speaks many different magics to many different persons.

Beatrice Fairfax

After centuries of loving and talking about love, there is no complete general agreement as to what love really is.

To many girls and boys, being in love is taking part in an entertaining flirtation which lasts a few months, perhaps, and is promptly replaced by another.

There are older people who will tell you that love means far more than that. That it rarely comes more than once in a lifetime and then only to men and women capable of experiencing it. According to this belief, many of us must go through life without ever knowing what love is at all.

Still others question whether love even exists. And so on.

"Is all this talk about love simply bunk?" a matron of 30 asked me in an interesting letter. "I have been happily married for 10 years and have four children. My husband and I are very fond of each other. But the truth is that there has never been even the least bit of excitement in my feeling for him. Does this mean that the people who say that love is a divine craziness are talking nonsense?"

Would you say that this is a typical case? Do you know other wives like this?

And how about the 19-year-old who confided "Don't you think it's funny and old-fashioned when people talk about love coming only once in a lifetime? If I were not in love practically all the time I should think I was growing old or something. Love is [illegible] the first few weeks of falling in love with a good-looking boy. Once I was in this state six months. But usually it's over soon. I've been in love for about a week. He seems perfect. I feel as if it would last forever. But it won't.

"The point is this. How shall I know when I strike the right one, the one that I can marry, the one who can always keep me interested and happy?

"This really bothers me."

Does this girl know what love is?

Or, shall we accept the testimony of the grandmother of 60, a gracious, intelligent woman, a widow for [illegible] and the mother of a large family, who said to me of love: "It is the only thing in life that matters. It is heaven."

But, after all, what she really meant was first love. She was thinking of her first husband, who died young. She had loved at 18 and married then. Two years later, the young husband was dead. For the woman, all the poetry and glamor and thrill of a lifetime were compressed into that early experience. Later on, and for many years she was a devoted wife and mother.

"But the ecstasy of first love," she said, "is something that can never be regained."

Do you agree with her?

Or do you believe, with many others, that first love is child love or puppy love, and that however sweet and charming and touching it may be, it is a thing that, ten years later, one smiles gently to [illegible]?

Is it your idea that one has to be really adult, so far as age is concerned—that is, at least past one's teens—and also grown up in [illegible] sense in order to experience the greatest and most [illegible] emotion of which human nature [illegible]?

Or do you suspect that all these notions of love that I have mentioned are just a little far-fetched, and that love is really the commonest as well as the most beautiful thing in the world? Do you believe that 21-year-old John and 20-year-old Mary, tucked away in their tiny suburban bungalow, know just as much of love as any Romeo and Juliet? Is love in real sense within the reach of all of us?

Some day I will tell you what I think about this question.

How to Keep Well -:- By Royal S. Copeland

You Should Reduce Slowly

RECENT YEARS have witnessed the evil effects of a diet craze. It might have resulted in making us a nation of underweight neurotics had it not been for the awakening of our good sense. Wholesome advice as to right methods of procedure has been accepted.

Dr. Copeland

Every person who considers taking on some drastic reducing diet should first consult a competent physician and submit to his supervision. A too rapid reducing diet may cause much harm.

The breaking down of the fatty tissues when reducing too quickly, causes the body to be flooded with waste products. These poisonous substances accumulate to such an extent that they are incapable of being eliminated or counteracted.

The human frame requires a certain amount of adipose deposit. It supplies a reserve of energy, and acts as a desirable padding material to the other tissues. The whole system works better when lubricated by the fats we eat. It is most essential that growing children and young people have this reserve storage. It assists the body to resist disease.

Although tuberculosis has decreased of late years in general, it is only too true that it has increased alarmingly among young girls and women, between the ages of fifteen and twenty-four. It is significant that these are the ones who have become slaves to the slender figure fashion.

Overweight after maturity is another problem which is attracting much attention. This may be dangerous. While diet governs the body weight to a great extent, other factors like the action of the endocrine glands, and chronic disturbances of any function of the body may also affect it. This is certainly true in many cases of overweight.

A reducing diet should be relatively low in fats and carbohydrates and relatively high in proteins. There must not be too much protein, but enough. By including in it also the necessary mineral salts, vitamins and bulk which fruits and the leafy vegetables afford, you are pretty sure to attain proper nourishment and a normal weight.

Sugars and starches must be cut down to a minimum. Creams, fatty meats and fish, butter and whole milk cheese, rich sauces and dressings should be avoided. Cottage cheese is a very good substitute for other cheeses in a reducing diet.

Daily exercises should form the backbone of a reducing program, rather than a cutting down to too dangerously near a minimum food intake. Meals should be sufficiently bulky so that hunger is satisfied, and the organs of digestion and elimination are given something to work upon. If your daily food intake which is fuel for body energy [illegible] there will be no residue left to form undesirable fat.

ANSWERS TO HEALTH QUERIES

R. S. Q.—I have been troubled with tickling and formation of sputum in the mouth and throat, thus I am forced to spit out. Have been examined and my trouble has been diagnosed as a sinus condition. I am still expectorating. What would you advise? My lungs have been X-rayed.

A.—Correct the underlying catarrhal disturbance first of all. Keep the nose and throat clear and keep up your general health. For further particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

A. R. Q.—What will eradicate wrinkles under the eyes?

2—How can I increase the height?

3—What should a girl of 15, 5 feet 1 inch tall, weigh?

A.—Gentle massage using a good cold cream, may be helpful. This should be done systematically every night to be of any benefit.

2—You will continue to grow and develop generally until you reach the age of 21. After this age it is practically impossible to add to the height.

3—You should weigh about 112 pounds.

Heart and Home -:- By Beatrice Fairfax

Girl Partly Right

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am 19 years of age, tall and considered good looking. I am by profession a boxer.

A few weeks ago I was introduced to a very refined, wealthy and pretty young lady of about my own age. We were out together on several occasions and I fell deeply in love with her. Recently she accompanied me to a house party where she met many of my friends and through them learned my profession. Since we had never discussed this subject before she seemed rather surprised and disappointed when she was told. As I drove her home her attitude toward me was quite cold. She said the reason for this was that she cared for me very much but would not consider me seriously until I had changed my profession. I am progressing exceptionally well in my chosen line and I would find it very hard to give it up now. On the other hand she means lot to me and it is very hard for me to decide upon which course to follow. IN DOUBT.

Dear In Doubt: The young lady is partly right, and partly wrong. There is little real future in the boxing profession, for no matter how good you are your time is limited before someone better comes along. On the other hand, a girl who is so brought up and so constituted that she could not sympathize with this particular ambition might be apt to disagree with you on other more vital things. The root of the matter seems to be an underlying variance of nature, and I should give the matter a lot of consideration before letting her have her way in changing the course of your life.

What Is Love?

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have often wondered how anybody can tell when they are in love. I have liked a lot of men and even thought I was in love, but it doesn't seem terribly romantic. How can I tell if I love someone? WONDERING.

Dear Wondering: If there is one man in the world whose doings seem more important than anything else to you, you are in love. If you can see yourself gladly and willingly testing new food combinations and mixing up bromo seltzers for him, search no further. You have found love in all its glory and meaning and don't let anyone tell you different! If you don't know anybody you feel that way about, don't get married.

Thawing the Bashful Swain

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am in love with a young man about my own age. We used to see each other every day in school. He seems to pay a good deal of attention to me. His chum has told me that he cares for me but that he is very bashful. He is a fine young man and comes from a good family. How can we become better acquainted with each other? Please answer me as soon as you can. WONDERING.

Dear Wondering: Since you both went to the same school, what better introduction can you have? It would be perfectly proper if your mother is willing to invite him to your house—why not write him a note and invite him and the friend you speak of to come some evening?

Proper To Accept

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a girl of 18. I met a young fellow from Virginia two weeks ago. He asked me to go out with him, which I did. He calls me up three times a week and asks me out to a show. He is considered very good looking, and I can see he cares for me, for he respects me so. Would you advise me to go steady with him for I believe he is going to ask me. SMILES OF SOMERVILLE.

Dear Smiles of Somerville: If the young man is so gentle and gentlemanly and you like him, I can think of no reason why you should not accept his invitations.

Miss Fairfax will be pleased to answer readers' questions regarding love problems which may be troubling them. Write on one side of the paper only.

Listen, World!
—By ELSIE ROBINSON

Build You a Nest!

DOES LIFE hurt you? Does its confusion bewilder you, does its cruelty dishearten you? [illegible] somehow feel [illegible] even then if you love in the home you have cursed with the friends you love? Then you are homeless for if your spirit is not at home, it matters little how comfortable your body may be in its earthly address.

Elsie Robinson

Yet your spirit may find a home, even in confusion that you hate.

Once life hurt another man as it is now hurting you. He was a gentle soul, a teacher named Sidney Lanier. He was very poor and he was [illegible]. Constantly he was [illegible] by pain [illegible] how little he could do for those he loved. To comfort him [illegible] poetry. And toward the end of his life he wrote a poem which no [illegible] every buffeted soul who reads it.

He had gone into the South to a place where the marshes stretched vast and social to the sea. More than ever, life was nagging at him, shrieking its terror into his ear. Perhaps you can guess how it tried his racked spirit longed for peace for the pen [illegible]

And there [illegible] Glynn, he seemed [illegible] home. For there was something about those marshes, a brooding Presence, that was like a Friend whom he had lost and found again . . . like a strong, quiet Friend in whom his soul could rest.

So in that blessed rest which came before his death, S[illegible] Lanier wrote [illegible] "Marshes of Glynn," of which this is one verse:

"As the marsh-hen secretly builds on the watery sod,
Behold I will build me a nest on the greatness of God;
I will fly in the greatness of God as the marsh-hen flies
In the freedom that fills all the space 'twixt the marsh and the skies;
By so many roots as the marsh-grass sends in the sod
I will heartily lay me a-hold on the greatness of God:
"Oh, like to the greatness of God is the greatness within

Are you weary and troubled? Homesick for a peace you lost long, long ago? Then reach out and [illegible]

Reach out beyond the noise and confusion that surround you—

Beyond life's racket and worry and pain.

Out, out, until the little noises of the world fade away and presently your spirit comes into that vast Silence that breathes above our [illegible].

That vast and living Presence which stretches out and out into the everlasting mysteries, as the marshes of Glynn stretched out and [illegible]

The Beauty Box
—By HELEN FOLLETT

To keep the cash customers interested, beauty shops must offer novelties. Hence platinized hair. You take your sacred glory hair to the beautyorium and have it plated in gold, silver or bronze. The hair is shampooed, waved and dressed. The operator of pulchritude processes then holds over the patron's expectant head an atomizer from which flows the magic metallic fluid. Next day a special preparation is applied for the re[illegible]

[illegible] new notion. It does not form [illegible] on the eyelashes and some of the pretty darlings [illegible]. It is applied with a [illegible] to the tip of the upper-story lashes and then on the under side. Only the faintest suggestion is used on the lower lashes. [illegible] If the made-up beauty [illegible] tears she sheds ebony dewdrops.

Sun tan makeup doesn't belong with trailing skirts and fluttery stuff, therefore it is out and done for. All right with jumpers, short sacks, abbreviated skirt and flying locks, but it was messy business putting on the counterfeit nut-brown calcimine. This summer's [illegible] back again to the peaches and cream standard. Almost no check coloring, only a faint accentuating of the lips. Eyes are played up more with delicate shading of the lids, preferred hues being mauve rose, a tawny brown and purplish blue. In the daytime eye shadows must soft pedal.

This Day in History

This is the anniversary of the death July 18, 1721, of Antoine Watteau, the most important French painter of the eighteenth century. [illegible] coloring and execution were excellent [illegible] ranked among the masters.

EVENING News of Street AMERICAN New York Stocks MARKETS

POOL LEADERS ARE ADVANCED IN WALL ST.

New York, July 18—The stock market appeared to be losing its wind for a time today, but operators for the advance insistently urged stocks upward, and finally achieved a sharp upturn in the last hour.

Several pool favorites were pushed up to new high levels for the recovery, but pivotal shares here and there showed distinct inclination to falter. About half of the May-June loss has now been recovered, and many traders felt that a breathing spell would now be in order.

SOME BULLS CONFIDENT

Commission house sentiment was less confident, and several advised their customers to take profits and wait a technical reaction to replace their lines at lower levels. It was argued that an advance of the duration of the current one, without a substantial momentary setback, was with few precedents.

The more enthusiastic bulls, however, pointed out that rarely if ever has the market experienced as steady and uninterrupted a decline as that of June.

Late word from the industrial and trade fronts was again of a rather inconclusive character, although of a still more hopeful tenor. There were signs of preparations for more activity in the steel industry, and the statement of President Sarnoff of Radio Corp. that the radio industry was now on the mend was greeted with some enthusiasm by operators in the stock.

Earnings statements averaged substantially lower, with a few notable exceptions. Chesapeake Corp reported first half net of $1.64 a share, against $1.56, and S. S. Kresge netted 70 cents a share in the June quarter, against 69c. Chicago and Alton, one of the first railroads to report June net, showed a deficit twice as large as last year.

COPPER AT 11 CENTS

General Motors reported a sharp reduction in June sales, but the fact that sales to consumers were about 10,000 units greater than factory sales to dealers showed a pleasing reduction of stocks. Copper continued to sag, with metal reported moving finally at 11 cents after the 11¼-cent price failed to attract many buyers. Granby reported second quarter production costs just under 10 cents.

Another shipment of $4,000,000 in gold to France was announced, but bankers feel that the country can afford to lose a large quantity of the yellow metal.

The imports of $200,000,000 this year were not really needed, although they undoubtedly contributed to the abrupt ease in money rates. There is a notable tightening of longer term credit in this market, but no decided upturn in money rates is expected.

Among the pool favorites, Radio, Loew's, Electric Auto Lite and Houston Oil rose 2 to more than 3 points. There was a burst of activity of International Telephone, which mounted a couple of points.

Some of the rails were strong, notably Wabash which gained more than in response to the Baltimore and Ohio's final acquiescence in the five Eastern trunk line plan.

Some of the coppers sold up a couple of points in what appeared to be short covering on the further reduction in red metal prices. Coca Cola, International Harvester, National Steel and Allied Chemical made fair gains. Case was an active high flier, selling up more than 13.

On the other hand, U S Steel, American Telephone, American Can, Vanadium, General Electric, Westinghouse Electric and Electric Power and Light sagged a point or two at times, although several appeared to meet good support, particularly U. S Steel. Atchison and Union Pacific lost 3 each and Auburn more than 5.

The bulls extended their activities in the final hour when a wide representation of prominent shares showed net advances of two to four points.

Taber Sees Farm Prices at Bottom

Washington, July 18—Prices of farm commodities have reached the bottom of their decline, Earl J. Taber of the National Grange stated, following a conversation with President Hoover.

"Just as soon as we can get business and financial America to realize that farm prices are at the bottom, there will be an upturn," Mr. Taber said.

He urged various agencies of the government loaning to the farmer to co-operate to utmost. He explained that he had no criticism of the Farm Board or the Farm Loan Board, but added that by concerted action of these agencies an upturn could be brought about.

New Accumulation in Railroad Bonds

New York, July 18 (AP)—Railroad bonds had the call with buyers in the listed bond market today and both high grade liens and convertibles were under accumulation. The rest of the market was quiet with the exception of a flurry of activity in treasury issues which eased under selling pressure.

BANKERS' POOL ACTION

Lionel D. Edie, professor of finance in School of Commerce and Administration of University of Chicago, says the part played by the bankers' pool in the October stock market crisis has not made a particularly good impression on the public but Federal Reserve authorities are entitled to great credit for relief extended at critical moments. He said at first the bankers' pool gave the impression that they were going to stop the panic, since everything was fundamentally sound and only the technical position was at fault.

A few days later, reassurance was punctured savagely and mercilessly by further violent collapses of the market. He said they did not make the decline "orderly" as promised.

He said they waited until industrial stock prices were at an average close to eight times 1929 earnings of such stocks, this being fairly typical of earnings at ratio level for the bottom of previous comparable bear markets, before finally stopping the decline.

He said they persuaded copper magnates to support copper stocks, motor magnates to support motor stocks and so on. Each industrial group with its back to the wall, with executives' fortunes often at stake, was called upon to be 'leader' among shares of its group. Finally, bankers themselves agreed to use certain amount of funds, limited it is true, but strategic, to throw in support where support was needed.

COPPER PRICES ARE SEEN NEAR TO BOTTOM

By FRANK H. MELOON

Copper prices, while they may shade the 11 cents a pound level, are generally viewed in State st. as hovering around the probable bottom. The amount of the red metal that would be obtainable under 11 cents is said to be small. Boston interest in the listed coppers is strong. Years ago Boston was the primary market for new coppers, many of which fell by the wayside.

JOHN D. RYAN

* * *

The record of the survivors, however, has been good down through the years. Calumet & Hecla, one of the leaders, was one of the first two stocks to cross $1000 a share and its lower price today is largely accounted for by the splitup of the shares. Copper stock buyers are mostly trying to guess the time to buy for John D. Ryan, Anaconda's chieftain, issues a cheerful statement.

* * *

Mr. Ryan states:

"I do not think present stocks are any menace to early recovery in copper. The industry has often sold in a couple of months more copper than there is above ground today, and, certainly, half the available stocks would be required to carry on a normal rate of business.

"The recovery in copper will come as quickly as in any other line. Expansion of the electrical industry and resumption of building, certain to result from any recovery in general business, will create a demand for as much copper as ever was produced, and the normal increase in consumption over any period of years will be as certain as it has been ever since the beginning of the electrical era 50 years ago."

Already Mr. Ryan's statement has brought about increased buying of the red metal shares.

A number of former State Street executives are now directing financial operations in Chicago. Despite unfavorable market conditions, Chicago's importance as a great investment center registered a remarkable increase during the first six months of this year, according to a summary of Chicago financing prepared by the statistical department of Lawrence Stern and Company, investment bankers.

This study showed that the total of $719,605,500 in stock and bond issues underwritten by investment houses having their main offices in Chicago, comprised 17.52 per cent of the entire volume of securities offered the American public during the first half of the year. This represents a gain of about 4 per cent over last year when Chicago houses underwrote but 13.54 per cent of the nation's securities.

* * *

The figures compiled by Lawrence Stern and Company showed that five cities, New York, Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia and Cleveland underwrote more than 92 per cent of the total financing in the entire country during the first six months of this year.

* * *

W. F. R. Murrie, president of Hershey Chocolate Corp., in connection with the retirement of additional preferred stock, states:

"Every sign points to a very satisfactory second half-year. Volume of business during the first six months of the current year exceeded the level of the same period of last year both as to sales and profits."

Seldom have investors had the opportunity to acquire insurance stocks at so close to liquidating values as at present. Most of the Hartford fire companies are selling only slightly above liquidating values on December 31, 1929, while National Fire and Phoenix are selling well below, when equity in subsidiaries is considered.

At close of the year National had a liquidating value of $69.93 exclusive of equity in subsidiaries amounting to $6.05 — against present market of 68-70. Phoenix had a break-up worth of $57.91, while its hidden equity in subsidiaries amounted to $20.89 a share. Present market is 78-80. Of course these liquidating values were based on security prices of more than six months ago. Subsequent market fluctuations have not materially changed such values, however, based on the Dow-Jones averages.

* * *

In connection with the above, it should be noted that insurance company business has been making remarkable strides this year.

COPPERS RISE IN BOSTON DEALINGS

Coppers were active and strong in an otherwise weak session on the Boston Stock Exchange today. Trading for the most of the day was dull but volume increased slightly near the close. Isle Royale advanced almost 2 points. Anaconda was over a point higher and Quincy Mining was fractionally higher.

Atchison dropped almost 2 points, Continental Securities 2, New Haven 1 and Westinghouse 1. Fractional declines were shown by American Telephone, American Woolen preferred, Boston Elevated, General Electric, Gillette, United Founders, U. S. Electric Power and Utilities Hydro & Rail.

Boston & Maine C stamped gained over 2 points, New England Public Service preferred was up 2 and Hathaway preferred was a point higher.

In the three months ended June 30, 1930, Massachusetts Investors Trust invested $2,898,700 in 32,645 shares of a diversified list of securities. During the same period 7143 shares of stock were sold for $388,965.

On June 30 the Trust owned 208,705 shares in 140 different companies. Market value of assets on June 30 was $16,276,696 against cost of $16,879,262. Cash was $381,903. At the present time market value of assets is in excess of cost.

Advice Is Free

Before you buy or sell stocks or bonds, you ought to secure unbiased expert advice. Send your investment inquiries with stamp to Frank H. Meloon, Financial Editor, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston. All replies are made by mail direct.

NEED FACTS

W. N., Medford—I have noticed your advice to others. What is your opinion of buying twenty-five shares American Radiator & Standard Sanitary at current levels?

Ans.—Both units of American Radiator & Standard Sanitary, formed in May, 1929, can point to a good record of earnings and dividends. For year ended December 31, 1929, net income was the equivalent of $2.04 a share. No direct comparison is available. Earnings for 1930 may be affected by the continued recession in building activity. An official recently said while business in the first five months of current year showed 23 per cent decline from similar periods a year ago, he did not anticipate any discrepancy between volume this year and 1930, because the company's nation-wide campaign for modernization and replacement of heating and plumbing equipment was meeting with success. At recent low levels the yield was close to 6 per cent. However, not all investors should buy common stocks. What securities have you?

ANOTHER STOCK

T. O., Boston—I own 15 shares St. Louis-San Francisco preferred and want to buy another stock. How about the common?

Ans.—Dividends have been paid on St. Louis-San Francisco common since January, 1925; current annual $8 rate from April, 1929. Net for that year was $11.82 a share compared with $11.01 in 1924 and $10.79 in 1927. Net operating railway income for four months ended April 30 was $5,151,426, against $5,794,242 for similar four months of 1929. The preferred stock, which you already own, is more conservative. How much do you intend to spend? Have you given any thought to an emergency fund?

KEEP IN THE BANK

Mrs. P. K., Needham—I am a middle-aged reader of your paper and have $2000 cash. Would you consider General Motors a good stock for me to buy now?

Ans. — Though earnings for General Motors justify the current $3 dividend, the stock is speculative because of the general business depression and its apparently bad effect on the motor industry. The company, however, is the world's leading automobile manufacturer. Dividends, with extras in cash and stock, have been paid from 1917. Under present conditions the savings bank would be the best place for your fund.

Human Nature to Ignore Lessons
Unhappy Experiences Forgotton
Plan to Help Family Given
Bank to Help Care for Fund

By Frank F. Loomis

Psychologists say that it is human nature to ignore the lessons taught by the unhappy experiences of yesterday. Judging from antics of the stock market this spring, the theory that people have dismissed from their minds the poignant lessons of last October may seem, to some extent at least, to be borne out by the facts. Hope springs eternal and speculators seem to have an overabundant supply of it.

Among the chronic speculators are some who engage in speculation as a business; others who enjoy its thrills. But there are also those who risk their savings in a desperate effort to build up quickly an estate large enough to yield an adequate income for their families. The desire to provide one's family in the years of the future with the comfort and happiness of today is commendable. The uncertain and often ineffective means employed to fulfill that ambition is to be deplored.

Regardless of psychological theories, humanists are still confident that the intelligent man will listen to reason. It is to these intelligent men, who will listen to reason, that the following infallible method of creating an adequate estate quickly is suggested. For example, take the needs of a typical family whose head is apt to be attracted into the field of speculation. Jones is 45 years old, has a wife and three children. He is worth $100,000.

Jones figures that his family requires an income of $12,000 a year to live in the manner to which they are accustomed. His present earnings are required for current expenses and he cannot hope to swell his estate by additional savings. He is anxious to leave his estate in such condition that, if anything happened to him, his family's circumstances would not be materially altered.

The income of Jones' estate at the present time would amount to about $6000 a year, just half the amount necessary. How can he double the value of his estate immediately so that it will yield the required amount? By means of an insurance trust! Jones can take out insurance in the sum of $105,000 and arrrange to trustee the policy with a bank under a trust agreement. He would also deposit with the bank approximately $95,000, the income on which would be sufficient to pay the premiums on the life insurance policy. At Jones' death, the insurance trust fund will amount to $105,000 insurance proceeds, plus $95,000, the amount of the fund. The total, $200,000, will produce the required income of $12,000.

Should Jones require part of the $95,000 for present personal use or in his business, he coulld place part of the fund in the hands of the trustee with directions to pay so much of the premium out of the fund as its income will allow and pay the remainder of the premium himself as it fall due.

* * *

Examine these figures carefully. Subtract from them the amount by which the value of your assets falls short of the figure used in the example given above, or add to them any amount to represent the additional value of your own assets. The result, relatively, is the same. Your estate swells like a balloon. Unlike the inflation attempted by speculative enterprises, however, this balloon cannot burst.

The insurance company and the trust company simply help you do your saving and provide insurance while the savings is in process.

LETTERS GIVE VIEWS ABOUT BUSINESS

By B. C. FORBES

New York, July 18—Many business leaders have been having their say in this column lately. Suppose today we listen to humans of less exalted rank.

B. C. Forbes

I inevitably, many very bitter communications are coming from men out of work. It hardly seems necessary, however, to publish such letters week after week, since to do so would not serve any useful purpose. Suffice it to record here that such letters are numerous.

This letter from A. V. Falcone, while it is phrased differently, reflects an idea that has become very widespread, namely, that most of the troubles which have overtaken the country could be abolished were the "big fellows" to say the word, nod their heads or lift their little finger:

"I am one of this country's many stockholders. As such I have had and still have the utmost faith in this country's industrial and economic good health. I am one of those who have watched their securities flop from their near-normal, not artificially inflated, market value to ridiculous and scandalous lows—one of those who felt that perhaps we had it coming to us. Having placed faith in fundamental economic principles that I took not only my own view, but that of dearly-paid investment services, I have taken a beating standing up.

"But when all basic principles point to completion, or a near-completion of the down-curve, and when the particular securities I own represent a flourishing industry, which is not only depression-proof but one which during these times has increased 83 odd per cent over last year, and still the values drop, it seems too much.

"It seems too much that 'big' men have not only not taken a proper hand, but that they have, if not generated it, at least permitted a dangerously increasing psychology of doubt and pessimism to spread. It seems too much that men and institutions who have some influence should spend it destructively, should even directly belittle the public confidence held by American people in their President. It not only seems too much, but such is it unsatiable, but it is suicidal.

"What can my conclusion be—that I have been wrong in my faith in my country? Damn—it, I still have it."

From Dr. Will P. Gleason comes this cheerful message:

"Why can't our poor public see that now is the time to buy good stocks — not this Fall when they are sky-high again? There is nothing wrong with business. Looks like a few of the big boys are giving a slap to the Administration.

"Let's get back in the market with our money—quit worrying and get this bad news out of the air, before something does turn up to worry about. Things are going fine through the Middle West. Just get big interests to start work and labor will start to spend as always."

Commenting on R. T. Crane's recent gift of $4,000,000 in stock to employes of the Crane Company, John Hoey says:

"R. T. Crane's action in dispensing a block of wealth intelligently to a great number of employes is an example of what is needed, but it is from a source that is not representative of the trend in American business. Big corporations, holding companies, show no such tendency toward humane interests, and it is becoming as true today as when the Sherman Act was passed and 'Teddy' used the 'big stick' that the greed of super-corporations is concentrating wealth and reducing the popular diffusion of the big necessity in prosperity—dollars."

From George H. Linden comes a very better letter comparing the action taken by Mr. Crane with that of other corporations which have not hesitated in dismissing employes indiscriminately. He says:

"I think unemployment conditions could be helped a lot by big business if, when finding it necessary to lay off help, it would pick out the married women whose husbands are also working. I think it is time for business and also city employers to look over their payrolls and give the white-collar man a chance to support his family."

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

Editor Boston American:

Nothing seems impossible if you have the will. I have in mind that courageous struggle for a college degree by a youth, crippled since childhood, who has just received the degree of B. S. from Trinity College, Hartford. He has fought many a winning battle with his handicaps. Leaving Newington Home for Crippled Children, Frank A. Fuhlbruck, using crutches and body braces all his life, underwent an operation to give greater mobility that he might struggle better for an education. He always had pain. There was never a moment through his five years of diligent study that he was freed from some inconvenience that would sap his strength, if he allowed it. But he didn't.

I thought your readers would like to hear about this young man and get encouragement from his example without his drawbacks.

Club for Amateur Writers Found in Hub

Editor Boston American:

For the first time in years there has again been organized in Boston a club for amateur and aspiring writers. It has been christened the "Boston Amateur Writers' Club."

Its purposes are: To bring together amateur writers, to stimulate them to productivity, to aid them by constructive criticism, to improve their work and get it more consistently accepted, thus causing them to receive checks more regularly, and to work gradually towards financial independence through writing.

The club officers are: J. Kruger Kelly, president; Miss Frances M. Small, vice-president; Albert L. Wilder, secretary, and Miss Helen Frances Keith, treasurer.

A meeting was held Wednesday evening, and other meetings will be held every two weeks hereafter. Headquarters are at 881 Massachusetts ave., Boston.

JOHN KRUGAR KELLY
President, Boston Amateur Writers' Club.

Women Have Other Thoughts Besides Ones of Wedding

Editor Boston American:

At one of the summer schools, I heard this from a teacher, that I think is not true.

He said: "Girls' dreams are always of the man they are going to marry; boys of what they are going to be. When a man's dreams are over, he has begun to die, but when a girl's dreams are over, she has begun to live."

All this has changed now. Girls are thinking more of what they are going to be. Marriage does not enter their heads as it did years ago. The whole surrounding of a woman's life have changed. This teacher was getting off a few antiques in history. Prospects have greatly changed, even in the last three years for woman.

MARY T. FORTESQUE.

Says Place for Women Is in the Home

Editor Boston American:

Why not take the vote away from the women and send them back to homes and babies where they belong? If they have no babies they know pretty well where to find some. What we need is a few honorable men to run this country, not women. Let the women look after home and babies (that which they were intended for) and the men look after the United States of America and not England, and only then will we have some more of the good clean administration we had years ago.

It is funny to hear the clubwomen (with no babies) and some of the old maids (with no babies) trying to tell the mothers how to rear their children and where to send them to school. Why not take away the vote and try another glorious experiment? MOTHER.

Money for Celebrations, but None for Camp

Editor Boston American:

Why has Boston so much money to spend on celebrations, foreign welcomes and parades when our city has refused the small sum of $300 to a health camp out at Mattapan?

Every summer the city has given to this cause, where 100 children are cared for and brought back to health.

This summer, short of funds, they are only caring for 60. Many children are on the waiting list that can't be cared for this summer.

"What a pity," still our city will forefloat its money to strangers. Why not spend some of this money on our city children for health. I wish some of you city people would drive out here some Sunday to see the wonderful work.

It was just one Boston woman that saved the camp from being closed this summer. "Three Cheers" for her. Won't our Boston people help—our mayor belongs to this association.

Pastor Makes Offering in Cambridge Church

Editor Boston American:

In your Letter Column I saw some reference to not allowing any organ in the Brattle Street Church. This was years ago.

The Scotch Presbyterian Church, Hampshire st., Cambridge, does not use an organ. This church sings the psalms of David and new fangled hymns are not used.

The pastor is expected to drop into the offertory plate every Sunday his contribution towards the expenses of the church. This is not a bad idea.

Prince & Whitley state:

"The market is evidently under perfect control, and the list is being searched from end to end for stocks in which there are large short interest, and the intensified squeezes are being engineered against these short positions.

"We consider it advisable to be cautious to the extent of using stop loss orders with the utmost freedom. The market is undoubtedly entitled to a reaction, and is likely to get it soon because such a reaction would be most likely to cause buying than would a steady continuation of the upswing."

CONCERNING RADIO

Edited by BILL WHIPPLE

Only those men who are in close personal touch with radio and broadcasting matters, who are near enough to them to get an occasional glimpse behind the scenes and note what is transpiring, can really realize what rapid and important changes are taking place in the industry.

Just a few short years ago the most interesting phase pertaining to radio, insofar as the general public was concerned, was not so much how good was the entertainment, but how good was the reception. Radio sets were not so perfected as those of today, and the fan got a greater kick from picking up on his set a program fairly free from static, or tuning in some distant station, than he did from the entertainment itself.

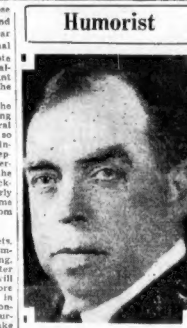
But as the manufacturers of sets, experimenting on them and employing science in their perfecting, gradually began turning out better and better instruments, the thrill of the listener was more and more lessened, as regarded his skill in operating his set, or even constructing his own set from purchased parts, and he began to take a greater interest in the program entertainment itself, even becoming critical and picking a station or two as his favorites; much the same as one has some favorite movie which he frequents.

The growth in the present day program, the assembling of which has become a highly-specialized business, such as "Dangerous Paradise Goldy" and a few others, it has been only lately that the announcer has begun to be responsible for its outstanding successes, by whom the radio audience might be entertained.

What has come to the consciousness of the listening-in radio stations just recently is the fact that the public is not so interested in lengthy hour, and half-hour broadcasts as it is in the short daily or tri-weekly, ten and fifteen-minute features, such as Amos 'n' Andy or Floyd Gibbons. Behind the scenes there is hustle and bustle in preparation for any such change.

Phil Cook, known to thousands through his morning broadcasts, is now featured also in the evening. Joe Cook (probably no relation to Phil) one of the best of present-day comedians has been recruited for service before the "mike." Will Rogers, Irving Cobb and a long list of other notable names are now being identified with those who perform over the air.

Humorist



IRVIN S. COBB, famous short-story writer and humorist, who was heard on the Coca-Cola program this week. (Underwood photo.)

Indeed the business is changing; more rapidly than the average person realizes. And the public is the one who will benefit from the changes, too. It is rather a humorous thought that radio entertainers are in one thing in these days of high living conditions, that as it approves does not put an added burden upon the citizen's purse. In a sense it is something we get for nothing.

Perhaps we do pay for our radio entertainment in a way, other than the cost of our sets. It is possible that the greater concerns who pay large sums for their time on the air, pass it along to the consumer of their produce—which of course is true—in an additional few pennies for their wares. Well, that isn't so tough; it's worth it.

Ask Suspension of Mace "Stealer"

London, July 18 (AP)—Suspension for the remainder of the parliamentary session of John Beckett, the Laborite, who scandalized the House of Commons by seizing the Speaker's mace and bolting for the door, was asked today in motions of the House presented by five Conservative members.

Beckett today said he had written to the Speaker explaining he meant no disrespect to him personally by his act of yesterday.

ACTUAL FACTS ON CONDITIONS TODAY

By FRELING FOSTER

Rubber Consumption Back to Normal

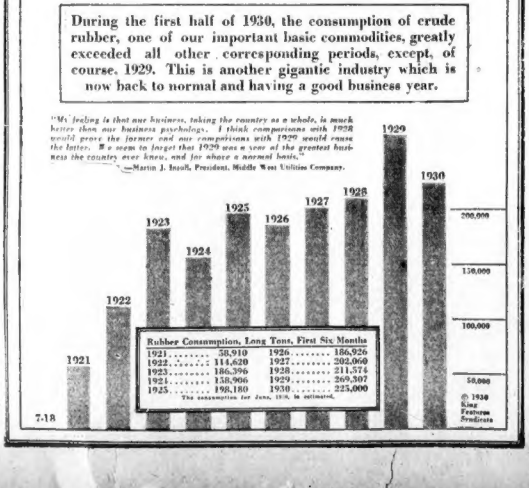
During the first half of 1930, the consumption of crude rubber, one of our important basic commodities, greatly exceeded all other corresponding periods, except, of course, 1929. This is another gigantic industry which is now back to normal and having a good business year.

"Mr. Insull is that one business, taking the country as a whole, is much better than our business psychology. I think comparisons with 1928 would prove the former and our comparisons with 1929 would cause the latter. It's easy to forget that 1929 was a year of the greatest business the country ever knew, and for above a normal basis."

—Martin J. Insull, President, Middle West Utilities Company.



Rubber Consumption, Long Tons, First Six Months

1921	58,910	1926	186,926
1922	114,620	1927	202,060
1923	186,396	1928	211,574
1924	158,906	1929	269,307
1925	198,180	1930	225,000

The consumption for June, 1930, is estimated.

RADIOPINIONS

There should be an extra pound of pep on tonight's Raleigh Revue program over WEEI at 10 o'clock because an orchestra is going to play selections from the musical show hit of a few seasons back, "For Goodness Sake" which William Merrigan Daly, the conductor of Raleigh program and George Gershwin cooperated to write. Foremost among these selections will be "Everyday," "Oh, Kay," and "Oh Gosh." In case the orchestra fails to react according to expectations there will be comedy galore from the Revuers with the understanding aid of Frank Black at the piano will render their model version of Rachmaninoff's "Prelude in C Sharp Minor." Lewis James will be around ready to sing "Give Me One Hour" at a moment's notice.

Another gripping (although some people say gripeing) drama will be enacted tonight over WNAC at 9 o'clock, on the True Story Hour. It is called "The Woman Who Said 'No' to Love," and deals with a triangle in which two sides never quite came together to make the angle definite. Moral: "Be true to the home." The theatre will supply the musical setting for the presentation.

Terrific mental torment, great biting of finger nails, a heart torn between two bright fires, Joe Cook and the Singer-Mandell fight. Which should we listen to? Both were due at 10 o'clock. Then came the act of Fate that saved the day. While listening to the Maxwell House program at 9:30 over WBZA there was a sudden interruption, and presto, through the courtesy of Maxwell we were going to hear the fight. It was short and sweet — that is, sweet for Singer. He tore right in, laid Mandell low, and Graham McNamee had nothing more to say. The new champ greeted the radio audience: "Hello Father dear, Hello Mother dear; gee, I'm so happy I can hardly speak."

Whereupon Joe Cook took up the burden on the 9:30 hour over WEEI. He started right in with a grand ego and a rambling line that began with a description of his own genius and ended with a account of his adventures as a baseball player 20 years ago. Anyone that could keep track of his ramblings deserved a solid gold medal. You must have been able to follow him but try to retrace how he started his spiel. If you weren't roaring with laughter then you must have been howling with pine. Joe Cook controls his audience with an absolute willingness on their part which is just another proof of his superlative "IT."

Joy to Valles-onians and grief continues for his enemies. Although he and his orchestra are leaving for a summer tour around the country he will continue to broadcast on the Fleischmann hour over WEEI at 8 o'clock, regardless where his travels bring him. Last night guest artists were Ohman and Arden, the piano twins who presented their intricate dueling with usual finesse.

LARGEST EVENING
CIRCULATION IN NEW ENGLAND

Why the Hurry?

Treaty Negotiators Fear Exposure of Administration's Secret Aims

In pressing for the immediate ratification of the London naval treaty, isn't the administration at Washington putting the cart of naval defense before the horse of national policy?

Isn't it attempting so to weaken the American Navy as to compel radical changes in American policy?

Our highest naval authorities object to this treaty because the navy it authorizes for the United States would be UNABLE TO DEFEND the Philippine Islands, UNABLE TO MAINTAIN the policy of "the open door" in the Far East, UNABLE TO PROTECT its commerce as a neutral in the event of another European war.

Nor have the negotiators of this treaty yet been able to refute the arguments against it brought by our highest naval authorities. What the negotiators have attempted to do is to discredit our naval authorities because they have told the American people the truth about this treaty.

But Frank H. Simonds, in a comprehensive analysis of the treaty, points out that our naval authorities have only done their duty in demonstrating that the navy authorized by this treaty "IS NOT ADEQUATE TO SUSTAIN THE NATIONAL POLICY." They do not pretend to say what the policy shall be but only what the defense of that policy requires.

And our highest naval authorities have made against the treaty a case that its negotiators are unable to answer because they flinch from telling the American people ABOUT THOSE CHANGES IN FOREIGN POLICY WHICH ARE TO BE URGED ONCE THE TREATY IS RATIFIED.

If the negotiators of this treaty could be compelled to confess now to those changes in foreign policy which they had in mind when they negotiated this treaty, it could never be ratified.

That is why the treaty was negotiated under false pretenses.

That is why it was drafted IN SECRET.

That is why both the Committee on Foreign Relations and the United States Senate have been denied all the correspondence relating to the treaty.

That is why its supporters are trying to jam the treaty through at an extra session of the Senate BEFORE the secret aims of the administration which negotiated it can be EXPOSED AND EXPOUNDED TO THE AMERICAN PEOPLE.

If the United States Senate is fatuous enough to ratify this treaty blindfolded, its eyes will soon be opened, but, ALL TOO LATE, to those radical changes in American policy which the negotiators of this treaty hope to promote by hamstringing the American Navy.

Police Blinders

Some News of the Day

Piece the news of the day together and see what you make of it.

The police are asked to produce in court twenty-five doors they had battered down or broken in, one at a time, in as many raids on a Boston place suspected of being a rendezvous for bootleg liquor.

The police can make it hard for one, if they are so disposed. Their disposition to be hard has manifested itself since Commissioner Hultman took command. The proprietor of the Hotel Ritz testified he had paid hush money for years and probably would have gone on for many more years supplying his patrons with "the real stuff," if the police had not become so avaricious that the hush payments ate up all the profits and forced him into bankruptcy.

The father of Oliver B. Garrett is convicted of bootlegging in a nearby city and pays a fine of $100. This Oliver B. Garrett, in case you have forgotten, is the ex-Boston policeman who was in command of the liquor squad, was indicted on the charge of taking hush payments and has now been missing from court and trial nearly four weeks.

Count the doors his colleagues have battered down in their quest for him; a baby could carry them all in one hand!

A new rum fleet lands off the North Atlantic coast. Canada having decided to refuse clearance papers, the rum fleet transfers headquarters to St. Pierre and Miquelon, the French islands north and east of New England. Ship captains are paid $1000 a trip and bonuses which double that amount. St. Pierre and Miquelon become prosperous overnight. The people pay bonuses to get the high-paid jobs on the rum ships.

Ships now anchor not twelve but sixty miles off the coast. When no one is looking, or when the right people are looking, fast motor ships put off to them and land their cargoes safely on the coast, then go back for another load.

Folks who get this liquor in its final, diluted form, will adopt precautions. They will put up steel doors, rather than wooden ones, unless they are familiar with the delicate art of diverting an enforcement officer's attention at the right time and in the right way.

McINTYRE ABROAD -:- By O. O. McIntyre

Brussels, July 18—We left Paris in one of those slashing cat-and-dog trains staged only in France and Tahiti. Despite the earliness of the hour, all the boy and girl employes of the hotel were lined up in the hall. And they can take the look I gave them and carve something pretty out of it in nice cold marble.

At 8 a. m. we made our exit through the Porte de la Villette in the direction of the Belgian frontier. The driver-owner of my hired motor car is a lean young Russian named Raymond. During an interlude of fast driving he turned in his seat to inquire: "Do you happen to be O. O. McIntyre, the writer?"

I fairly beamed a grateful affirmative, and if Will Rogg, who is in his own unrented car ahead, did not put him up to it—and I almost know he did—Raymond and I are going to be real buddies. Rural France is always delightful. Poppy fields were a bright wet wash red and cyclists were flashing by holding opened umbrellas.

Every farmer in France has a bicycle instead of a Ford. Here and there the pond-like Aisne touched our path and coiled ribbon-like away again. Drenched blue-blouzed peasants bogged through the fields in sabots. A sudden curve at Amblèy revealed four acres bristling with white crosses, a huge flag honoring heroic soldier dead.

The first stop was at Soissons for a bite at the Hotel de la Croix d'Or, and the fare was largely beans and pate de fois gras, for which the section is named. Soissons is as famous for its beans in Europe as Boston in America. And of course it filled many thick eight-column headlines during the war.

Soissons still shows the scars of its generous shelling, and almost every other man on the quiet streets is minus a leg, an arm or an eye. One of its finest cathedrals is still being patched. My French received its customary shabby treatment at lunch. Ordering "Soissons Beurre," they brought me a bicarbonate of soda.

What is more, I downed it, although I hate the stuff, but a lot of villagers were taking in my funny American get-up, and I wanted to appear every inch the traveled wording. It was my first lunch in many years, and I celebrated it by making way with a hatful of pickled shrimps, whiskers, beady eyes and all.

We crossed the Belgian frontier at Bettiones. The custom officials, flossed up like drum majors, seemed more interested in watching the contestants of a country-side motorcycle race flash by than examining our passports. Come to think of it, I believe I would rather look at a motorcycle race than most passport pictures myself.

• • •

My first impression of rural Belgium was of shutters. I came from a shutter village and like them. On each building were shutters of varied hues—pink, green, red, yellow, brown and white. The next impression was of billboards, being the sort of traveler who always misses the scenery when there are billboards to read. Each house had a goat roped to a stick in the yard. I left my goat happily in France. They are welcome to it.

Country folk in Belgium indulge a primitive sort of variant of the nine-pin game — bowling on the green. Four pins are set up along the roadside and players hurl wooden balls at about 50 steps away. Women and children as well as men play, and it seems to inspire much giggly laughter.

The first town of consequence in Belgium was Mons, which as I recall was for a time German headquarters. It has been practically rebuilt, and offers the spic and span newness of one of those Kansas prairie stops on the Santa Fe. Mons will fill a niche in my memory as the last stand of the old-time livery stable. I came across it in prowling up a side street. It offered all the old familiar odors, a side front office, a whip and harness room and is the only institution I ever saw of its kind that sported an electric sign. In Mons, as in all other Belgian villages, there are no front yards. All the houses are flush on the sidewalk. You get the idea Belgian wives are real housekeepers.

There was a great to-do in Brussels upon our arrival. Everywhere the national colors were flying, bands playing, and from thousands of throats came the cry of "Vive la Belge!" I misinterpreted the cry at first, and was very embarrassed. I thought Brussels had turned out to pay respects to the results of my luncheon time shot of bi-carbonate of soda. But, if subsequently developed all Belgium was honoring the centennial of its independence.

• • •

I wonder if everybody entering Brussels at some time or other does not think of Edith Cavell, the martyred English nurse?

H. G. Wells Writes

ON "THE SCIENCE OF LIFE"

WE LEARN from this Drosophila work that this linkage of genes which are carried by the same chromosome is by no means complete.

H. G. Wells

When the pairing chromosomes curl round each other they may exchange bits of themselves. They may come unstuck along a rather different line from that in which they met.

Thus the genes are shuffled and appear in ever-changing combinations even when they are carried by the same chromosomes.

This brings us to the line of reasoning upon which the position of the genes on the chromosomes has been actually mapped out. The probability that two genes on the same chromosomes will be separated in the curlings and writhings of the reduction division depends on the distance tween them.

The closer they are to each other, the less likely they are to be parted. We can place the genes therefore by noting the degree to which their effects are linked together in inheritance.

This may seem a tenuous argument, but it is no finer spun than many of the tools of thought that modern physics is forced to use, and it finds its justification in practice. The idea can be tested, the method based upon it gives consistent results.

Bit by bit it has proved possible on these lines to map the places of the known genes on the chromosomes, and this accomplishment is the crowning triumph of modern genetics.

In the longer chromosomes of Drosophila, a gene nearer one end is just as likely as not to be separated by crossing-over from one near the other end; although they both lie in the same chromosome, such genes are actually no more tightly bound together than if each were in a different kind of chromosome.

These chromosomes are loose, long sausages. Other genes, however, may lie so close that they only become separated three or four times in a thousand. This is the tightest linkage so far found and probably means that the two genes are actual next-door neighbors.

Don't Underrate Russia

She Teaches Her Children

TEACHING TIDINESS TO RUSSIAN CHILDREN

France had her revolution, disagreeable, bloody, scornful of established rights, and of all religion.

The rest of Europe predicted only horrible disaster from such a revolution, and the return of the kings that had been kicked out, one of the most harmless guillotined.

But from that French revolution, which was a revolution of thinking and earnest intention, as well as one of cruelty and horror, there has come the great French Republic of today, powerful, efficient, determined, UNCONQUERABLE.

There is too much despising of Russia among modern nations, and especially among the very wealthy class.

The Russian revolution was brutal, although not half as cruel as the long reign of the Czars.

It propounds and accepts, as did the French Revolution, theories concerning property that seem preposterous to us.

It declares that all must be done for and by the "proletariat," and that the proletariat, or working class, must rule. We know that, as a matter of fact, the "proletariat" is ruled as autocratically now as it was in the days of the Czars, and plays no part in the government, except that of absolute obedience.

Russia offends the deeply religious feelings of the masses, outraging that which to them is most sacred. But theories pass and religion remains—such is the history of the world.

And IT DOES NOT DO TO UNDERESTIMATE WHAT RUSSIA IS DOING NOW FOR THE FUTURE as a result of today's planning and working and thinking.

Above all, and most important, is the fact that RUSSIA IS TEACHING HER CHILDREN. The Czar kept his people in brutish ignorance, and preferred that it should be so. The peasants could not read, they had vodka, 40 per cent alcohol, instead of books, and books, with any real thought in them, were forbidden.

The two pictures here show you what a change has come over Russia.

In the first you see children being taught, among other things, tidiness, how to take care of themselves with soap and water, and with knowledge of their own bodies.

It is said that the Russian process of education is severe, too much is asked of the children.

But Russians have immense endurance, great mental powers. The Russian child, perhaps, can stand more, as has been shown in our public schools in America, than other children.

After they have been taught in the city schools the students are sent out to teach the grown-up peasants, men and women, and some of the children are quoted as exclaiming: "It is hard on us to teach the peasants. They are not civilized."

When you see a keen, alert, well-educated child of 18 years old teaching bearded peasants and their wives to read, you see something new in the world's history.

Other governments, including many deeply religious, have been content to teach their people to dig ditches, cultivate the fields, contribute to the wealth and ease of their royalty, nobility, clergy and commercial classes.

DON'T UNDERESTIMATE RUSSIA, THE NATION THAT TRIES EXPERIMENTS TO HELP AGRICULTURE AT GOVERNMENT EXPENSE, THE NATION DETERMINED TO EDUCATE ALL THE CHILDREN, AND TO ENABLE EVEN THE OLD MEN AND WOMEN TO READ, IS NOT ONE TO BE DESPISED.

Russia may shoot too many, may show brutal ignorance and intolerance in its attitude toward religion, and the highest liberty, which is liberty of belief.

But a nation that TRIES, that DARES, and that TEACHES is one that will probably surprise its sluggish critics.
